Is this why?
Tourette Syndrome is an inherited, neurological disorder characterized by repeated and involuntary body movements (tics) and uncontrollable vocal sounds. In a minority of cases, the vocalizations can include socially inappropriate words and phrases -- called coprolalia. These outbursts are neither intentional nor purposeful. Involuntary symptoms can include eye blinking, repeated throat clearing or sniffing, arm thrusting, kicking movements, shoulder shrugging or jumping.

These and other symptoms typically appear before the age of 18 and the condition occurs in all ethnic groups with males affected 3 to 4 times more often than females. Although the symptoms of TS vary from person to person and range from very mild to severe, the majority of cases fall into the mild category. Associated conditions can include attentional problems, impulsiveness and learning disabilities.

Most people with TS lead productive lives and participate in all professions. Increased public understanding and tolerance of TS symptoms are of paramount importance to people with Tourette Syndrome.

Depends on your interest. Some people have that much in ham equipment. I have about 10 grand in my home theatre setup.

I like a lot of other stuff to, Flatt and Scruggs or any fast banjo music, anything with a heavy bass line. I hate rap. I don't find the music part of rap to be very creative and the lyrics can be done by anyone capable of speech.

He like the tunes cranked up too so I guess it works for both of them. In his younger days he played guitar in a heavy metal band before he went to engineering school.

I wonder how many alternators they had to install. If I turn the gain up on Flatt and Scruggs is some real pickin'. I watched a special with Scruggs and his friends the other night, that guy can still pick with the best.

I listen to stuff that doesn't get much air play, from Neil Young to Bread.

Not yet. I've been waiting to make sure the technology wasn't going to dead end like beta and laser disc. My next upgrade is going to be a ceiling mounted HD projector. I'm also waiting for the local theatre to close down so I can buy a few rows of seats.

I saw Neil Young in concert many years ago. Breads good to. About 5 years ago I got to see Robin Trower. There were only about 150 people there so I had GREAT seats.

Good idea. I started wearing eye protection after having several pieces of metal dug out of my eye.

Is it LCD or Plasma? I've heard some of the pro's and con's of each type. I think I'll wait and let everybody else pay for the R and D costs of the maufactures before I get one. Then they should get real cheap.

As for the programming that may not change much either. I've heard that the broadcasters are thinking about using the extra bandwidth they could use for HD programs to offer other services like multi lingual audio, subtitles, cometary's on the program as it is broadcast etc. Your best bet is HD movies on DVD. But then again you have the new trend were they FORCE you to view all the crap at the beginning and you can't FW to the darn menu to start the movie. Even the movie theaters are getting in to the commercial business. You sit there through car commercials, lipstick commercials etc. Anything to make a buck.

If I read it right it's Lijewski that has the 3KW system, and he is just appearing in the photo with the owner, Witek, of the higher powered system.

I mis-spoke, it's a sony projection. Nice big TV for the family room but not plasma or lcd. I can't bring myself to spend that much coin on a boob

I'll take your word for it. The link that was posted:

The rest of the page appears blank. Is that the right URL?

Hello Chad (and all). My name is Jim Savery, and I am with BEHRINGER in the USA. Our offices are near Seattle, WA, which is the best point of contact for your particular service and support needs.

Chad, we have two authorized repair centers near you in Illinois. The first is MidWest Audio, located up in Arlington Heights. You can visit their web site at:

http://www.midwestaudio.net

The other local service center is in downtown Chicago, and it is called Deltronics. Their web site can be found at:

http://www.deltronicschicago.com

Finally, we have a spare parts retailer online in New York City. They are one of our oldest repair centers and they can ship parts nation-wide. See them online at:

http://www.dbmproaudio.com

If you need technical support or parts identification help, you can call my office at 425-672-0816, or use our online support system at:

http://www.behringer.com/05_support/index.cfm?lang=ENG . See the bottom left corner of the page for the online support link.

I hope these various resources address all of your existing concerns about service and support availability for BEHRINGER products in the USA, Canada and Latin America. I will also post this information to rec.radio.cb just to make sure it reaches you and all other interested parties. We understand and respect the non-commercial nature of USENET, so please accept this post as a one-time response to the specific concerns you voiced earlier.

Best Regards,

Jim Savery

I see HDTV cable as this. If I'm walking through my yard and see dog shit,
I know it's dog shit. I don't need a friggin magnifying glass to prove it!

As long as the programming sucks I'm not watchin it!

Hell, my 4 yr old logs less that 2 hours a WEEK in front of the tube!

Horse power and wattts can be converted in a linear equation, all you need to know at this point is the efficiency of your amp and alternator. My old rig pulled 11HP, haven't calculated the new one but the sub amp is digital and WAY more efficient. it will beat your head on the dash and I still have yet to see it pull more than 25A.

The mid/hi's (biamped) (for the audiophiles) are class A/B biased into A for a long time it runs pretty warm for such a light load so I loose it there :).

mopeadope is under AKC control. He can't stop. Think of an alcoholic to get the drift. Also, think of those battery powered penguins, flapping their wings 'til the batteries die. That's mopeadope...the AKC makes him respond, he has no control over it.

Such is the keyclown mentality. Funny to watch, easy to make happen. AKC has been saying that for years. Keyclowns, especially mopeydopey, are just too well Mastered by the AKC to exert any sort of control.

HISTORY AND ENLIGHTENMENT

At about the time our original 13 states adopted their new constitution, in the year 1787, Alexander Tyler (a Scottish history professor at The University of Edinborough) had this to say about "The Fall of The Athenian Republic" some 2,000 years prior. "A democracy is always temporary in nature; it simply cannot exist as a permanent form of government. A democracy will continue to exist up until the time that voters discover that they can vote themselves generous gifts from the public treasury.

From that moment on, the majority always votes for the candidates who promise the most benefits from the public treasury, with the result that every democracy will finally collapse due to loose fiscal policy, (which is) always followed by a dictatorship."

"The average age of the worlds greatest civilizations from the beginning of history has been about 200 years. During those 200 years, these nations always progressed through the following sequence:

From Bondage to spiritual faith; From spiritual faith to great courage; From courage to liberty; From liberty to abundance; From abundance to complacency; From complacency to apathy; From apathy to dependence; From dependence back into bondage."

Professor Joseph Olson of Hamline University School of Law, St Paul, Minnesota, points out some interesting facts concerning the most recent Presidential election:

Population o f counties won by: Gore = 127 million Bush = 143 million Square miles of land won by: Gore = 580,000 Bush = 2,2427,000

States won by: Gore = 19 Bush = 29

Murder rate per 100,000 residents in counties won by: Gore 13.2 Bush = 2.1

Professor Olson adds: "In aggregate, the map of the territory Bush won was mostly the land owned by the tax-paying citizens of this great country.

Gore's territory mostly encompassed those citizens living in government-owned tenements and living off government welfare..."

Olson believes the U.S. is now somewhere between the "complacency and "apathy" phase of Professor Tyler's definition of democracy; with some 40 percent of the nation's population already having reached the "governmental dependency" phase.

Actually, it is you that have been told you are what you are because of myself, but that is no revelation. I recognized the weakest link (yourself) and forced you into sabbatical. In other words, I controlled your fall from what grace you once held. At least you now recognize it is I that is responsible for your behavior, as you haven't the free will you are unable to comment on other's choices.

I'm not the one demeaning myself with curse words and a temper and actions I blame on another usenet participant. Yea, well, you were proud of your call back then. You've ruined it, which is partially what drove you insane. You cracked under the Yeah, yeah. Metalhead here as well... I just meant it's ridiculous that they chose to select rock music as an example of the IDIOTS that are driving around with systems so loud they can't hear an emergency vehicle behind them and then they're sitting so low in their cars they couldn't see it either!!

Looks to me like the writer is afraid...NOBODY can possibly write an article about LOUD stereo's in cars these days and not mention rap.

Rock Music indeed!!

While this is indeed quite the set-up, this dude would barely bust a grape in the stereo competitions held in Miami. Imagine entire vans on hydraulics comprised of nothing but amps and speakers..they're out there.

I'll take your word for it on that.

Those "digitial amps" are really called class "D" and they can range from 90 percent or better in efficiency.

Sissy Keyclowns, you may mention all the "anti AKC" picnics and rallys you like, it will not change a thing. AKC is still your lord and master, you are still helpless pink muffins, and always have been.

Not so much the 'freebander' bit, but that he is known for causing trouble among ALL operators (including freebanders), and operates on amateur bands unlicensed, and throws out other peoples names and callsigns to try and justify the info he is seeking, and has caused numerous people on air, on various frequencies, lots of grief and trouble.....

If he was 'only a freebander' - i.e. if his only 'crime' was operating on the out-of-band CB channels, then much of this would not have happened - but I think we all know and accept that you don't need a high power all mode full access amateur HF transceiver just to talk on the out-of-band channels!!!!!

From the Amateur point of view - unless someone is licensed or is currently studying to get their licence, do we really want them having access to such equipment? We (amateurs) complain when unlicensed stations start using our frequencies, causing trouble for other legitimate stations - this is one such station (known from experience)...

And all that before we even get to the fact that we cop the same (or very, very similar) messages, cross-posted, several times in a week at the very least - for Christ's sake you have to at least give people time to read your post before you start re-posting!!!

Actually, it's best to replace the whole coax... no connections in the middle. But, if that is not viable, the barrel connector is certainly preferred to other options.

The idea of insulation tape is NOT a good one, too many possible problems could result from it.

freebanders in rec.radio.Cb like twistedhed and mopedholic have lots of excuses but #1 is they say they just dont care and being free to bootleg is more important than military needs. Twisty has said several times the military doesnt use those frequencies even though they are listed as military.

> HISTORY AND ENLIGHTENMENT

Turns out those "2000 Election Facts" -- actually, an e-mail that has been floating around for years -- were not just silly, they are also, in part, flat-out wrong.

Here is what NewsMax's article says:

Professor Joseph Olson of Hamline University School of Law, St. Paul, Minnesota, points out some interesting facts concerning the most recent Presidential election:

Population of counties won by:
Gore = 127 million
Bush = 143 million

Square miles of land won by:
Gore = 580,000
Bush = 2,2427,000

States won by:
Gore = 19
Bush = 29

Murder rate per 100,000 residents in counties won by:
Gore = 13.2
Bush = 2.1

The first big error: Olson didn't say any of this. As the urban legend-busting folks at Snopes.com discovered, while there is indeed a Hamline University and a Professor Joseph Olson, he "confirmed that he had no authorship or involvement in this matter." Olson's name apparently got added to the e-mail somewhere along the line.

The statistics on the population of counties and land area appear to be accurate, Snopes reports, but they're irrelevant to NewsMax's headline claim that "Red States Are the Real America." Counties and land masses don't vote; you'd think NewsMax might have noticed that by now.

The murder rate, however, is completely wrong. Snopes computed homicide data by county for 1999 and 2000 from the National Archive of Criminal Justice Data and came up with quite different numbers. According to Snopes, the murder rate in Bush counties was 4.1 and in Gore counties, 6.5. A distinct difference, but not as dramatic as the one NewsMax advances.

This is not the first instance of this legend appearing on NewsMax. To show how old this little legend is, Neal Boortz cited it in a Nov. 29, 2000, column, complete with erroneous reference to Olson and incorrect murder rate statistics, to which he adds: "Ah, those Gore voters. This country needs more of them, right?" Diane Alden also cited it in a Dec. 5, 2000, commentary.

In fact, ConWebWatch wrote about Boortz's column back in 2000, noting where Boortz didn't that Olson was a member of the National Rifle Association board of directors. That's how old this thing is. And NewsMax is treating it as a "current" news story?

The number of states listed is a big clue to the e-mail's age. Note that the numbers add up to only 48. As Snopes points out, this implies the original article was written before the results of the Florida and New Mexico vote-counts were determined; the final tallies were 30 states for Bush and 20 for Gore. So much for copy-editing at NewsMax -- they couldn't even be bothered to add up those obviously incorrect numbers.

That's not the only case of e-mail legends creeping into NewsMax copy. Snopes reports that the stats e-mail usually includes a quote from "Alexander Tyler," an 18-century Scottish history professor, comparing the U.S. to the lifespan of the Athenian Empire of ancient Greece and the following sequence of events in a democracy:

From Bondage to spiritual faith;
From spiritual faith to great courage;
From courage to liberty;
From liberty to abundance;
From abundance to complacency;
From complacency to apathy;
From apathy to dependence;
From dependence back into bondage."

The problem? First, wrong name. Snopes concludes the e-mail is referring to Alexander Fraser Tytler, who was indeed an 18-century Scottish history professor, which brings us to the second problem -- there is no evidence that Tytler said anything about the lifespan of democracies.

Yet NewsMax writers fell for this, too. Miguel A. Faria Jr., NewsMax's resident Castro-basher, got Tytler's name right in an August 2001 article but erroneously attributes the Athenian democracy quote to him. George Putnam cites the bondage sequence in a November 2003 column but attributes it to Ezra Taft Benson, secretary of agriculture in the Eisenhower administration and former president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (the Mormons).

NewsMax wasn't the only one suckered in. WorldNetDaily's Joseph Farah recited the bondage-to-bondage sequence, credited generically to "historians," in a July 2000 column and again in July 2002 (in fact, both columns are pretty much the same, so instead of plagiarizing others, Farah in this instance plagiarizes himself).

What does it say about NewsMax that it considers an incorrect four-year-old e-mail to be current news? Nothing about journalistic integrity, that's for sure.

And I suppose 'Twisty' would know exactly what the Military are up to at any given point in time!!!

Like any other criminal, they will continue to sprout crap right up until the day they are caught out, which usually happens to the most moronic and audible first. There's little point arguing with these type of clowns - they have very little between the ears and fail to comprehend the most basic of concepts. They don't use the frequencies because they are serious or knowledgeable, they do so because it is illegal and they don't have the balls or brains to do anything else other than hide behind a microphone and keyboard and sound big and tough.... Shame that it takes all but a few minutes for law enforcement agencies to trace someone, both on air and via the internet....

Unfortunately for them (and others), all their excuses will mean sweet stuff all in the courts - and their obvious lack of intelligence and technical capabilities means they really wouldn't have the faintest idea who or what they could be interfering with. Frequency allocations exist for a reason - to avoid interfering with other users, services or even countries.

I can sympathise with the serious operators that operate out-of-band to experiment, etc. After all, I don't think there are many amateur operators that didn't start on CB, and a lot will have operated on those out-of-band frequencies in their time. The big difference is that they had the common sense not to announce to the entire world what they were doing, and they also had the intelligence and motivation to get off their arse and learn what they needed to know to advance and be able to experiment, legally, with frequencies and modes that these freebander clowns can only dream about...

Just because a frequency sounds clear, doesn't mean it's not being used.....

To make it even more confusing they can also be called class T because a certain company, tripower I think, makes a proprietary one chip wonder driver circuit. same operation different name. I prefer to call them switchers :)

They are certainly the best car audio subs I have had the pleasure of owning, but they need to be boxed according to infinity's specs (1 cu ft sealed box per sub). They must be broken in slowly at low levels. GREAT frequency response.

Yea,,,I know them Ozarks are full of deer. Mountains are a beautiful change from the swamp for hunting deer. As it stands now, I won't hunt deer (anymore) unless it's above the freeze line and that's sometimes tough to do in Florida. If you get a nice rack this year, post a pic.
Good luck.

I'll do that. I've passed on 2 small bucks and a number of doe, mainly because I put $20 in on the big buck contest. If I don't have a nice rack by Dec. 1 then I will most likely shoot the first available deer I see.
After all I can't eat antlers.

Cool! Hey Doc,,,let me know when you start funnin' around with building your own..,,,I'd like to check it out. We need to do the eyeball thing, eventually..I'm pretty sure I'll be off the flats just south of you next Saturday night...I'll let you know for sure,,,I''ll definitely be local on the radio next weekend so you can give me a shout.

(Will do Twist. Me and the locals in this area run channel 10 or I can be found on ssb just about anywhere above 40. I'm gonna order the PCB tomorrow, hopefully will get it by this weekend. A friend of mine has sheet metal the aluminum. I haven't used a stomp shear or brake in ages so I better get a little extra just in case.)

Whoops,,,,,my bad,,,,getting confused with all the "Doctors" on this but replying to you. Ha,,,there indeed ARE flats not too far from you, but I haven't been there in many years,,,my last visit was to Bonner Springs, Sandstone, KC and central/southern MO area. Still,,,,,,,keep me/the group informed how this project comes off. I'm interested in the end performance results.

>LOL Not a problem. If your ever in central MO.
>give me a holler.

Email me with a permanent email addy,,I'll stick it in my addy book. I have been to central MO and have family not far from you. I really like the Mark Twain National Forest for camping. Also know of a great home made barbecue place in Potosi.....best pulled pork I had anywhere, bar none..sandwiches were 99 cents. I spent a long time there bs'ing with the owner about the strains of hogs and the interbredding of wild hogs and domestics. He took me on a tour of his entire operation in his back yard. He came off with his secret recipe to me, since we were speaking the same language (and probably since I had Florida plates and was not a local). We cook it the same, ony he adds a naural sweetener. No doubt I will get back to MO in the future...plenty of reasons to go back there.

MO has lots of great BBQ spots, I judge most by the quality of their ribs. I'm trying to get some family members onboard for a cold weather camping trip. This time of year the parks are deserted and we can have the place to ourselves. Knock down a few beers and get loud without having the water patrol breathing down our necks.
E-mail addy on the way.

Find an old 148 or grant. The older ones are better made with decent audio,

I stick 'em in the microwave for about 10 seconds, let 'em crinkle up make "interesting" patterns.

Yes I have heard that before, the new Cobras suck.
This Cobra was new out of the box and the AM receive was way down , found a bad IF coil, replaced it and now it recieves well on AM but SSB still sucks, and this is with some mods in the SSB if gain area.

Hustler magazine ....

Classic. Blaming others for feeling what you truly feel. You attempt to raise your self esteem by name calling and lies. Yet in the end you get spanked so hard on this newsgroup, that your self esteem gets lower day by

I finally found a use for those pesky AOL discs that clog my mail box. I tried one out in my clay pigeon launcher and they work great. Wal-Mart gives them out for free. If I grab 2 at a time every time I go there, plus what they send me in the mail, I should have plenty to shoot at come spring. Has anyone found any other good uses for these?

I like your way of thinking. I'm in the process of building a new archery range in the yard (can no longer fire a gun off my porch),,,maybe I can use some of those. WIth the proper light reflecting off them, they may make great night targets.

The Green Monkey Theory

Where did HIV originate? Prominent cancer virologists and government epidemiologists have theorised that HIV originated in African green monkeys. Purportedly the monkey virus "jumped species" and entered the black population. From there it migrated to Haiti and Manhattan. After the virus entered the black heterosexual population in the late 1970s, it rapidly spread to millions of blacks because of transfusions with HIV-infected blood, dirty needles, promiscuity and genital ulcers - or so the experts said.

What color is your fur George?

Besides, I don't know that whoever posted as wa3moj wasn't wa3moj. The post in this thread was SO obviously not mopar that it veritably bleeds all over the screen...

Hi Dr. Death,

Lots of lawns to mow today but I need your advice.
I want to accuse Doug of identity theft, at the same time I want to keep on forging his and his wife's callsign in here. Do you have any thoughts on that subject? Maybe Landshark can help me?

Well let's see......why not get a job and pay your child support so I don't have to support your kids with my tax dollars. The you can go over to George's house and contract green monkey AIDS. If you have a crank organ, you and George can collect some nickels and pay someone to put your ham antennae up properly. Hope this helps.

My skanky old lady (KC8QJP) aka Crisco Kathy helps me stuff things up my slathered it up with Crisco.

Since you asked so nicely, I do work. I am an electrician.
Since the house I am doing is only 3 miles from here I have the opportunity to take my lunch at home. I am not an alcoholic as you wish to believe, though upon occasion I will slam back a few. Couch potatoe? I think not, I am in the mist of remodeling my house and I take small breaks to see what nonsense (like this) has been posted. As far as sleep is concerned I usually only sleep 4 to 5 hours per night. Today I did not work as I wanted to finish some drywall in my utility room and pack for this weekends trip to the lake. I leave at 5:30. I hope this makes you feel better about my employment status as I would hate to think it's keeping you up at night.
Have a nice weekend, I know I will

1627. Coast Guard Searching For Boaters Off Egmont Key

From The Tampa Tribune
Published: Oct 15, 2004

The U.S. Coast Guard is searching for nine people after the catamaran they were in reportedly capsized five miles west of Egmont Key early Friday.

Just after midnight, the agency received a quick distress call from the vessel Endeavor, said coast guard spokeswoman Danielle DeMarino. During a brief and often broken radio transmission, the operator of the boat gave its location, said there were nine people on board, and said they were all getting into a life raft, DeMarino said, however, the distress call was interfered with by the high-powered transmissions of local outlaw radio operators, one of whom identified himself as "Twistedhed".

``They didn't give their names while they were abandoning ship,'' said DeMarino.

There has been no corresponding report of nine people missing, DeMarino said. And the name Endeavor is too common to do a background check on, if the boat is even registered in the United States.

The coast guard launched a search with a C-130 airplane, a HH-60 helicopter, and a rescue boat, but found no evidence of a ship wreck, she said. Weather conditions worsened Friday during the search, with winds and swells both picking up.

Mariners were urged to be on the lookout for either the catamaran or the life raft. Anyone with information on the lost mariners or "Twistedhed" is asked to contact the Coast Guard at (727) 824-7506.

I dont think so. Doug has told me many times that me showing up at people's homes is just proof of my frustration and my powerlessness at the hands of the AKC. I think he is right. Can you imagine how pissed off and bothered I'd have to be to actually drive to someones house and threaten them? Doug has really gotten under my skin. AKC this. AKC that. I may just go bananas again and hop in my car with a digital camera and a bunch of hams callsigns and QRZ addresses.

No you're confused. It's ME, STEVEO, I am the one who takes the pictures.
Not you, or Doug, or George. But the following conditions must be met first:

1. Is there a corner I can hide behind like at Leland's house while I take pics?

2. You can't be home when I show up. I don't like it when hams are home.
That time in Toledo I made a big mistake. I really thought no one would be home. Wow, was I ever scared, I barely got out alive. You should have seen me peel out with that rental car!

3. If I get arrested call Twistedhed, he is my lawyer.

Steveo,

I was set to invest billions in a new line of CB radio accessories that would bring the Trump Style to thousands of truck stops across the USA.

But you singlehandedly have ruined it all.

You've given CB radio a bad name with your lawless, out-of-band antics and anti-American trash talk..

And your perverted gayness has turned public interest and private investment away from the radio hobby.

So bite me.

You're an ass.

And you're FIRED.

I have an application note in one of my National Semiconductor data books for a high speed comparator chip that shows it being used in a switching type amplifier. Its a real simple circuit believe it or not. The design used bi-polar power transistors for the output. Now you can buy complete high power switching amp chips from several vendors with outputs up to 100 watts in some of the ads I saw. I don't use them for any designs I do so I don't really pay much attention to who sells them. I would assume that doing an Internet search would turn up some of vendors.

No one cares what you have or dont have, idiot. That is what eats you up. You would like to be taken seriously, but you are not. As a result you stamp your feet and whine and cry about it. This is exactly what you did as a child when you did not get candy or toys when you wanted them. We have you zeroed in. You just hate it cuz you are unable to stop it.

Get it in your mushy peanut brain, dumb dumb...nobody cares what you say or do. We already know what it will be, because we are your programmers. You can't stop it because you are not in control of your faculties, peanut butter brains.

Having said that, here take this...It is a new set of batteries so when your pengin in bondage wings slow down in their flapping you can keep on. The energizer bunny loves you.

After listening to the Mp3 clip I have a concern about the FCC pulling a fast one.

The third commissioner to speak, Jonathan Adelstien was talking about "techniques to address interference issues". He said "some of these systems can co-exist very well with existing licensees"

Why did he feel the need to include the word "existing"? Is the plan of the FCC to grandfather "existing amateurs" and allow them a say in interference issues, but nullify the future amateurs ability to complain about these same issues? Will the total burden of interference be the problem of future amateurs? Will the FCC only have to wait until the existing licensees die out before they can go full throttle with BPL?

Who's Chris? Killfile me next please.

A story about a monkey, Bi-Curious George.

A sick little monkey who'd caught a case of fever
Saw a man in a yellow hat who thought he was just gorgeous.
Now he's over here, always monkeying around Experimentation makes him feel so fine.
Now he just wants to slide on a fireman's pole.
See him swing away on a telephone line.

He's just a little monkey with an open mind
You know, he's going to learn his lesson in the by and by.

Bi-Curious George
Got a thing with the man in the yellow Hat who's always nearby.
Bi-Curious George
He's got a friend who's going to love him in the end...

Shocked himself with AC/DC
Steered his rocket where no man had been before.
When he comes back down they're going to give him a medal
That silly little monkey just loves to go exploring.

He's just a little monkey with an open mind.
You know, he's going to learn his lesson in the by and by.

Bi-Curious George
Got a thing with the Man in the Yellow Hat who's always nearby.
Bi-Curious George
He's got a friend who's going to love him in the end.

Bi-Curious George
Got a thing with the Man in the Yellow Hat who's always nearby.
Bi-Curious George
He's got a friend who's going to love him in the end.

With apologies to Brooks and Dunn...ours is funnier...

In Medina County in the town of Hinckley

There's a faggot keyclown who craves hard pee-pee

His joint starts jumpin' every night when his lips go down

He's got blowjobs and rimjobs, handjobs and dope

That's where all the keyclown folk go

To buttfuck boogie....

He gives great head jobs, he sucks hard for his money

When it's quittin' time he leaves the lot runnin'

He fires up his moped bike and lets the gerbils run

He goes puttin' out of the truckstop

To that hideaway stuck out in the woods

To do the buttfuck boogie...

Yeahhhh...nose to ass he's lowclass, just watch that faggot go buttfuckin'

Moped, givin' head, Nebo meet him out back, yer gonna buttfuck

Whoa, git down, turn around, fag keyclown, buttfuck boogie...

STUPIDASSED REDNECK SOUNDING PIANO AND VIOLIN BRIDGE
PROBABLY PLAYED BY A ROTTEN TOOTHED INBRED

The gay pimp said "Hey Mope, what'll it be?"

"I want a shot of ChukkeeSukkee there, slobberin' at me!"

The pool table's bein' used

For gay sex hotter than the 4th of July

I see assclown keyclowns, all sissies and fags

All out making it shake

Doin' the Buttfuck boogie...

Yeahhhh...nose to ass he's lowclass, just watch that faggot go buttfuckin'

Moped, givin' head, Nebo meet him out back, yer gonna buttfuck

Whoa, git down, turn around, fag keyclown, buttfuck boogie...

Gay sex, black white or mex, watch them keyclowns go buttfuckin'

Moped, givin' head, Nebo meet him out back, yer gonna buttfuck

Whoa, git down, turn around, fag keyclown, buttfuck boogie...

I said...gay keyclown, Mope goes down, turn around, buttfuck boogie

Hardeeharhar. More proof mopeydopy can't take it much longer. Soon he'll rent another econobox car and drive the highways of Ohio while kissing a picture of N8, gulping liquid courage - which in his case is - men's sperm.

He knows the AKC runs his life, makes him jump on command, makes him cry on cue.

Where will little mopeydopey go in his travels? What will little mopeydopey do on his next fruitless trip? The answer is - the only thing he can do - nothing. He is incapable of preventing the mighty AKC from mentally bitch-slapping him on a daily basis.

Wilson sold out to MACO years ago (base antenna line).

Later (much later) Wilson decided to manufacture MOBILE antennas. They are the BEST! Wilson then sold the MOBILE line to BARJAN.

For the BASE antennas, you need to look at MACO!

The Cobra 2000 was and still is the BEST CB radio on the market! It has the best receiver of any radio made (other than the Stoner which is a whole different catergory).

The 10 meter radios have a bunch of features (crap), but for CB, you will not do better than a Cobra 2000! This is why they are sought after; even to today!

If you want noise crap and echo, buy your import junk. The real operators will continue to use the Cobra 2000!

The best amplifier offered to people out here was the Skywave by Brian Griffey! I haven't seen or heard from him in years. I bought one of his amps and it is WONDERFUL! Even my tech, Justin from FG Best Communications, says it is a well made and engineered amp! It has worked flawlessly since day 1!

It used a pair of 2879 and was conservativly rated for 180 watts RMS (pep is much higher).

If Brian ever comes back, snatch one up!

You pathetic pink sissies believe one individual, N8WWM, has the power to be over the planet at once, watching you, listening to you, recording your every move, spanking you when you're bad keyclowns, rewarding you when you're good keyclowns.

And it's right that you should think that way, since your subhuman keyclownism prevents you from leading useful lives, and you do need to be watched and managed like so many frightened gerbils. However, you would go out of your minds if you knew the truth, which is that N8WWM no longer needs to have direct contact with lowly keyclowns. The whole AKC thing runs on remote control. I am building an 80,000 watt amp using 2sc2879 transistors, and need a really heavy duty power supply. Anyone know of any vendors who can supply this? Size is also an issue. I need one that is no bigger than a shoe box. After building the amp, I don't have much room left in here. The heat sink is taking up one entire wall, and the 15 ton AC unit pretty much takes up the rest.

Mopeydopey, your faggotry knows no limits and you ought to be lauched off the earth like a satellite along with you liquid lipped pal Twathed.

Twathed vainly grasps for anything that supports his lifestyle of gay sex in truckstops, fuggly pimping, jockstrap sniffing, and general faggotry. All he does is prove again his inferiority and keykweeness.
Let him post, it's a laff. Again he has jumped and squealed like a puppy looking for a teat, all on our commands.

Here is the truth. It pisses off keykweenz, but who cares about keykweenz anyway?

We say what is too much, not illegal operators or possesors of illegal equipment. If you are too ignorant to know what is legal and what is not then you deserve to get whacked.

We control the content of this NG, not keyclowns. We have forbidden amp auctions to be posted here. Keyclowns obediently ceased posting them.

We are nowhere near 100% elimination of illegal equipment sales on the internet, but each bust begins to add up. It is obvious by all the disingenuous lies that keyclown amp makers put on their ebay auctions...things like "Attention ebay, this auction complies with ebay community standards", etc.
See the fear of the AKC in that lie? They have experienced our stinging slap before, and will again.

Mopeydope and all of you other keyqweenz take note: You have not made one single dent in the existence of the AKC. The insults, etc., are water off of a duck's back. We control this NG, we make you dance, we rule you. You will bark and dance on command, as you have done for years, until we tell you to stop.

There is not one thing on this earth you can do about it, there is no way to silence the AKC. Insults won't do it, threats only strengthen us, ISP's are a nickel a pound, so that won't work either. Exposing our names won't work...we don't need to hide, YOU need to hide because you are federal criminals. Lying won't work: We don't care what you say about us, although obviously your bruised little keyqween egos care what we say about you.

Your world of blatant and unpunished criminality is forever changed by a ruling body known as the AKC. We have a few other tricks up our sleeves that are yet to be revealed, but when keyqweenz start dropping off the NG you may get a clue. You people are totally powerless to stop the AKC. The ONLY power keyqweenz have in this NG is what we might confer on them, and since we confer you no power because we do not care what you do...your pathetically mewling efforts amount to zip.

Going on 5 years we still stand and RULE. Our karma runs over your dogma, keyqweenz.

A typical efficiency is about 50%, possibly less at these current levels, so figure14000W input, or 1000A at 14V? I'm going to bet that there's some significant I^2R loss in that system.

Of course on the new car systems with the higher voltages, things will get a lot easier.

First you blame BP on Stevo, then Twist, now me?

Would you make up your mind? I've only got one newsreader on this machine, and that's all I need. I have no need to hide behind pseudonyms, or play MPD and have 50 nick/screen/randomlettersandnumbers names...

In your mind, it's but a coincidence. To the rest of the world, it's the farthest thing from the truth.

How 'bout that Tavarez? Not only did he give the game away, he had previously bragged about how much better STL's bullpen was than Houston's, and how STL was a better team. You know, with his hitting one player and almost hitting another, a northern team with less class than Houston would have taken his head off. What a loser. Maybe he should try ice hockey.

I feel sure you will find that was a forgery... someone claiming to be Steve.

> Back to what my question is
> I noticed the Pro-95 scans only VHF ..
> They make a scanner that scans both VHF/UFH..

But what if the offending signal is on HF?
Then again, will it not find hundreds of signals... how will you know which to blame for your troubles?

It is not an easy job finding the cause of such interference, you need to look a little more into it.
Does the interference happen on all channels or just one?
Does it happen all the time, constant for long periods or in short bursts?
Is the picture breaking up, sound breaking up or can you hear someone chatting up some local bird with silly lines like, "do you take it up the sh*tt*r"?

If the signal is really strong, there are frequency "sniffers" available which will detect strong signals and give you the exact frequency.

But beware, not all interference is due to a bad transmitter, much of it is due to poorly designed TV or audio equipment.
Sometimes, a cheap filter on the TV may cure it - and avoid much fighting and future bad feeling with neighbours.
If it is a neighbour, tred carefully, you have to continue to live near them.

1. AKC has nothing against CB'ers, only keyclowns. Mopeydopey lies.

2. Keyclowns are not CB'ers, showing again how mopeydopey lies.

3. Keyclowns know this, but they lie to CB'ers to make them think differently

4. The homosexual stuff you read in this NG started a long time before the AKC, showing again how mopeydopey lies.

5. If you are not a keyclown the AKC has no issue with you whatsoever.
Mopeydopey knows this, but dissembles in an effort to confuse others.
He lies.

In order to further understand mopeydopey's motivations, please read below.

You have to understand the motivation behind Steveo's visits.
Keyclowns are desperate people...they do not have the mental faculties to tolerate being bugged about their keyclownism. It makes them upset because they have to hear dissent. Steveo is the poster child for this attitude. He simply cannot take it when somebody gives him crap about being a keyclown.

This atttude has no doubt been developed by a lifetime of crying and whining to get his way. It started in his childhood, when he whined and cried in supermarkets and malls to get candy or toys. When his parents indulged him in these situations it reinforced the idea in his young mind that if he yelled and cried to get his way that he should always get it.

As he became a young adult and found that life had to be met on life's terms, not his, he railed at the injustice of it all. Teen years immediately before this stage found him in a constant state of barely controlled rage and often acting out in his frustration. Typical of such incidents are punching people who cut him off in traffic, yelling obscenities out car windows, and showing no consideration for others.

Such is the mentality of a keyclown. RF spectrum, to a keyclown, is nothing more than a wide open space to play in. If this were a private yard or a public place belonging to all taxpayers, the evidence of keyclownism would be obvious. The place would be uncaringly trashed with garbage and the observed attitude would be "So what if it is a mess, you wanna MAKE me clean up after myself, sucker?"

The visits to peoples' homes are an expression of this frustrated, thwarted, angry personality. Steveo tries to make someone conform to his ideas of what should be in the NG by making threats and visits. To Steveo, the worst thing on earth would be if the AKC knows his address, and his logic is that him knowing AKC addresses should strike fear in their hearts. You see, when he visits with his 12 gauge digicam the AKC should shake. They do...with laughter.

The fact that Steveo shows himself to be a disturbed individual in these visits does not dawn on him. This is because he is not inhabited with the normal sense of right and wrong. His opinion, like that of all keyclowns, is that whatever he wants to do is OK, and if someone disagrees then he has the right to attack them, physically or otherwise. This affliction is commonly called a sociopathic disorder.

The very fact of posting this message will bring a barrage of name calling, threats, and other things that keyclowns believe are effective. They think they are effective because they are effective at riling THEM up. This attitude is consistant with keyclownism's main root causes: the fact that keyclowns are only aware of what they want and have no concern for others, coupled with a total inability to tolerate even the most basic forms of disagreement.

The reactions to this post will prove the thesis as presented. Keyclowns are simple creatures, and always behave in a predictable manner.

It is because when he was a child he cried and whined to get what he wanted, and his parents gave in on the toys and candy. As an adult (physically, not psychologically) he can't take it that he is shown up as a keyclown, so he does this stuff because he thinks he can stop the AKC.

He is a miserable failure. This NG is not for illegal radio operators. TEHY are the ones who are off topic. Mopeydopey doesn't even belong here.

Ironic choice of words there, dougay. You really shouldn't bring up taxpayers when afterall your skank girlfriend/wife Krisco Kathy was a CPA before getting busted for filing bogus tax returns, and stealing from all of us. See below for the truth.

KC8QJP Lee Kathleen
http://acc.ohio.gov/dhearing.html http://acc.ohio.gov/bdmn0401.html
FORMAL DISCIPLINARY HEARING-KATHLEEN R. LEE
Chairman Woods noted that Kathleen Lee was issued CPA certificate 36,525 on July 15, 1998. The hearing was to consider disciplinary action against Ms. Lee's CPA certificate pursuant to Ohio Revised Code section 4701.16(A)(5), conviction of a felony under the laws of any state or of the United States. Ms. Lee was convicted in the United States District Court, Northern District of Ohio of five counts of Aiding & Assisting in Filing False Tax Returns, a violation of 26 USC 7206(2), on June 12, 2000. Ms. Lee did not appear at the hearing. The Board agreed to deliberate the disciplinary action in a later executive session.
Action taken.
Kathleen R. Lee, CPA 4701.16(A)(5)-Convicted of aiding & assisting in filing of false tax returns. CPA certificate revoked. 2001 Apr 24
Now I could be wrong, but that's the way I remember it from the CB radio.

I am going to tell you this publicly. If I see another post from you in this newsgroup. I am going to do, what I was going to do before, but I was going to let it drop. I WILL in fact, turn this threating e-mail over to my lawyer, who will in turn, turn it over it his freind, who is the FBI director in Detroit. Who will in turn contact the head guy at the FBI office in Toledo Ohio. Ya'll think you all are pretty slick, But I know your game, and I will put a stop to you all, once and for all. The U.S. Coast Guard is searching for nine people after the catamaran they were in reportedly capsized five miles west of Egmont Key early Friday.
Just after midnight, the agency received a quick distress call from the vessel Endeavor, said coast guard spokeswoman Danielle DeMarino. During a brief and often broken radio transmission, the operator of the boat gave its location, said there were nine people on board, and said they were all getting into a life raft, DeMarino said, however, the distress call was interfered with by the high-powered transmissions of local outlaw radio operators, one of whom identified himself as "Twistedhed". ``They didn´t give their names while they were abandoning ship,´´ said DeMarino.
There has been no corresponding report of nine people missing, DeMarino said. And the name Endeavor is too common to do a background check on, if the boat is even registered in the United States.
The coast guard launched a search with a C-130 airplane, a HH-60 helicopter, and a rescue boat, but found no evidence of a ship wreck, she said. Weather conditions worsened Friday during the search, with winds and swells both picking up.
Mariners were urged to be on the lookout for either the catamaran or the life raft. Anyone with information on the lost mariners or "Twistedhed" is asked to contact the Coast Guard at (727) 824-7506.

Couldn't have been my party. Hell, all of us can swim from Egmont to shore.....and back, if necessary. That's about a nice afternoon swim, nothing more. C'mon down and I'll teach you how to float instead of sink. Then again, we can't all be Aquaman, but you are always free to remain in my shadows. Concerning your jacked lack of information, 727 is not a Tampa exchange, and Egmont Key is not in Tampa.
And of course, there is always the fact that I would never waste my money on something as useless and limited as a catamaran. You may now resume convulsing over the cornfusion and curiosity that gets the best of you.

You can beg all day for other people to send complaints, but when was the last time someone stopped trolling just because they got TOSsed?
Never. The complaints just encourage them to come back using another ISP. That's the way it will be until ISPs start requiring references and conducting background checks before accepting their clients -- and we both know THAT'S never going to happen.

So have you ever heard the phrase, "Please don't feed the trolls"?

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1418 October 15, 2004

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1418 with a release date of Friday, October 15, 2004 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T.

The FCC acts on B-P-L amd the IEEE readies a standard for Broadband Over Powerline hardware. Find out the impact on ham radio on on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1418 coming your way right now.

THE BPL FIGHT: THE FCC RELEASES ITS BPL REPORT AND ORDER

The FCC has acted to make Broadband Over Powerline a part of the telecommunications landscape. Amateur Radio Newsline's Paul Courson, WA3VJB, in Washington and Mark Abramovich, NT3V, in Philadelphia take an in depth look at the FCC decision and its impact on Amateur Radio:

FCC Michael Powell: "Would all members in favor of the item signify by saying aye? All those opposed? The item is adopted, thank you very much (sound of gavel banging down)"

(WA3VJB report) Although several took note of interference concerns, none of the Commissioners voted against the proposal, and only one Commissioner voted any dissent at all. His issue was thet utility companies might improperly try to raise your light bill to help pay for BPL. The measure passed, and BPL can now be built and marketed to real customers nationwide.

The system thet's been in the prototype stage for a while now uses the power lines as a way to transmit and receive telemetry with computers such as those used in the home. In sending that data over the wiring in a house or on the poles outside, small amounts of signal radiate and can cause interference to users of the same frequencies BPL uses on the power grid.

The ham radio community, led by the research of ARRL laboratory manager Ed Hare W1RFI, documented the potential for electrical noise during this prototype and testing phase. The League submitted what many consider alarming findings to the FCC as a protest and challenge to the BPL proposal on ham radio's behalf.

FCC Commissioner Michael Copp addressed that point before he voted to approve:

FCC Commissioner Michael Copp: "I remain concerned with the question of interference to amateur radio users. I take the concerns of this community very seriously, and I believe the FCC has an obligation to work hard to monitor, investigate and take quick action to resolve harmful interference. "

When Copp voted approval, his dissent focused only on whether there were safeguards to keep utilities from using electricity revenue to help pay for BPL.

The proposal from FCC technical staff calls for interference mitigation procedures, including an online public database to help identify by zip code where BPL might be a source of interference, The database also will name a contact person at the company running the system in that zip code, to negotiate and resolve complaints.

Commissioner Copp said he hopes the processs will be quick:

FCC Commissioner Michael Copp: "If an amateur radio user makes a complaint, and an agreement between the BPL provider and the amateur radio user cannot be reached, the FCC should step in and resolve the matter. These cases must not take years to resolve. I hope we'll have some really effective rapid-turnaround procedures here in place..."

FCC Chairman Michael Powell has been an early flag-waver for BPL, and spent time leading up to the vote praising its potential as a competitive force against existing high-speed data distribution systems. The noise made by those concerned about BPL noise must have reached the top desk, because Powell took time to acknowledge BPL's potential negative impact, although he never said the word interference in his remarks:

FCC Chairman Michael Powell: There are users of spectrum that are affected by this. We've taken that seriously from the very beginning. I want to particularly say to all those wonderful amateur radio operators out there. They're still an important resource to the American communications landscape. They're ones that we continue to care about, continue to want to foster and prosper. And we have taken great care to ensure that the protections in this item are necessary to allow that service to continue. We will continue to be vigilant about it, and put the tools in place for that.

But then Powell returned to his celebration that BPL would soon provide another way to bring high-speed data to the masses, citing advantages for homeland security, the reliability of the nation's power grid, and the U.S place in the world.

FCC Chairman Michael Powell: "Let me underscore that the potential for America, and the American economy is too great too enormous, too potentially groundbreaking to sit idly by and allow any claim, or any possible speculative fear keep us from continuing to drive this technology drive America into the broadband future."

For reaction to the FCC's approval of Broadband over Power Lines, we turn to Mark Abramowicz, NT3V:

(NT3V report) For the American Radio Relay League, the FCC's decision in the BPL proceeding wasn't a surprise.

The ARRL's leader says now, more than ever, amateur radio operators will have to be vigilant about any BPL interference that appears and be prepared to act with a complaint that could go all the way to the FCC.

ARRL president Jim Haynie W5JBP says there were some encouraging comments from commission members about the value of the Amateur Radio service. And, for the first time, an admission from the panel that BPL technology is far from perfect.

Jim Haynie, W5JBP: "You go back a year, a year and a half ago, there was all this talk about: What interference? There is no interference," Haynie recalled. "And fully half of the meeting was how to deal with the interference issue.

"So the commission now has finally realized that what we've been saying all along does exist and I'm sure the N-T-I-A had a lot to do with that, too."

Haynie says among the restrictions the FCC placed on the BPL providers is establishing a database of utility and system operators who will be accountable for neighborhood interference complaints.

He says it appears that provision may have come out of the ARRL's direct lobbying of commissioners.

Jim Haynie, W5JBP: "We've actually had personal meetings with a number of the commissioners," Haynie says. "And Commissioner (Michael) Copps is one of them. Kevin Martin was another. Ms. (Kathleen) Adelstein was another one.

"And these were all held in the past couple of months so it's fresh on their mind. They know where we're coming from. That's what the league has been doing on a direct basis rather than just file a written petition or comments, which we did."

Haynie also credited the direct lobbying efforts aimed at members of Congress - many of whom look favorably on the Amateur Radio service.

--

Jim Haynie, W2JBP: "They've made their feelings known to the commission and while they support inexpensive broadband for America, you know, on the other hand they understand the infrastructure that's involved with Amateur Radio and public safety," Haynie says.

Finally, while Haynie says he'll reserve additional comment until reading the full FCC document, he feels some sense of relief at what finally emerged.

Jim Haynie, W5JBP: "I know there's some detractors out there that for whatever reason think the league probably lost and sold them down the river. And that's not the case at all," Haynie says. "When we look at what happened at the commission meeting and actually read the details of the report and order, I think what the league has been doing for the last couple of three years will be quite evident.

"So I think we did a good job. Did we get what we want, no - not entirely. But we also knew going in that you can't just say: 'I don't want BPL at all.' It's going to be done in some form or fashion, now the only question is how much?"

Over at CQ Magazine, Editor Rich Moseson, W2VU, is feverishly studying what the FCC has done and what impact it will have on Amateur Radio.

He tells me the FCC's press release on the subject seems to contradict the commissioners' assurances that interference mitigation should be done in a timely fashion.

Moseson notes that in the same sentence such resolution of interference problems would be done without disruptions of service to BPL subscribers.

Rich Moseson, W2VU: "So, in other words, the users of this non-licensed service have priority over licensed users," Moseson says. "This is what we were afraid of to begin with."

--

Moseson says he's also concerned about the closing comments of FCC Chairman Michael Powell that were not included in the public statement released on the commission's website.

--

Rich Moseson, W2VU: "He starts out practically pandering to hams and then turns around and tells us not to stand in the way of progress," Moseson says.

While sounding pessimistic, Moseson says we'll have to wait and see what's in the actual FCC report and order.

With my colleague, Paul Courson in Washington, I'm Mark Abramowicz, NT3V, in Philadelphia.

By the way, you'll find the audio comments made by some of the commissioners as a Web Extra feature. You can find them by pointing the browser on your computer to our website, www-dot-arnewsline-dot org. (ARNewsline (tm))

THE BPL FIGHT: IEEE READIES BPL STANDARD

The Institute of Electrical and Electronics and Engineers -- thats the IEEE -- it has begun to develop standard 1675 for Broadband Over Powerline hardware.

According to immformation at the organizations website, the scope of this standard will be to provide Utilities and Manufacturers standards for the commonly used hardware for BPL installations. Also to provide standard installation, maintenance and operation methods to ensure the safety of both Utility and Non-utility personnel working on BPL equipment.

This project will not cover data transmission, protocols, or other aspects of BPL related to the internal workings of this technology. More information is on-line at http://grouper.ieee.org/groups/bop/ (IEEE)

THE BPL FIGHT: HAMS AND CB'ERS UNITE - DOWN UNDER

Still with Broadband Over Powerline issues, word that ACREM, the Australian Citizens Radio Emergency Monitors, have joined the fight against B-P-L. WIA Newsman Martin Howells, VK2UMJ, reports:

Following reports that the ACA may be considering the removal of interference protection for some HF radio users, ACREM New South Wales forwarded an official written protest to the ACA, the Minister for Communications, the Shadow Minister for Communications, and the leaders of both major political parties.

This was followed up with a further submission lodged by e-mail outlining the Japanese report that showed interference from BPL as high as 300 MHz. Although ACREM is primarily a CB emergency monitoring group, the interests of all radiocommunications users, including amateur operators, is also a concern especially given the potential safety-of-life issues of widespread interference to HF and VHF frequencies. ACREM New South Wales will continue to play an active role in the BPL fight, alongside the WIA and other groups.

This has been Martin Howells, VK2UMJ, for WIA National News.

Asn B-P-L looms in more and more places, users of many radio services are banding together to fight it. The joint efforts of hams and CB'ers in Australia is just one example of what's happening, worldwide. (WIA News)

ENFORCEMENT: $10,000 FINE AGAINST JACK GERRITSEN, Ex-KG6IRO, AFFIRMED

The FCC has affirmed its earlier tentative fine of $10,000 against unlicensed Los Angeles area radio operator Jack Gerritsen, the former KG6IRO. This for operating radio transmitting gear after the agency set aside his license.

As previously reported, on June 15th of this year the Commission's Los Angeles Field Office issued a Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture to Gerritsen in the amount of ten thousand dollars. This, for Gerritsen's apparent, willfull and repeated violating of Section 301 of the Communications Act by operating a radio station in the Amateur Radio Service without authorization from the Commission to do so.

Gerritsen sent in a response to the notice on July 13th. In his filing Gerritsen claimed that he has a valid amateur license that permits him to operate on all of the radio frequencies detailed in the Notice of Apparent Liability and that that the FCC's earlier action to set aside of his amateur license and KG6IRO call sign was unfounded. He also claimed the set aside did not prohibit him from transmitting on the amateur radio bands given his claim that his amateur license was valid. Also, that any possible suspension of his license is also pending a hearing before an Administrative Law Judge and that it makes the Notice of Apparent Liability moot until any suspension occurs.

Well that might be Gerritsens interpertation of the FCC's decision but its not shared by the agency. In affirming its decision to require him to pay the ten thousand dollar fine the FCC says that Gerritsen has no license. Just a pending application. Therefore there is no license for the Commission to suspend that the correspondence sent to Gerritsen from the FCC informed him that his amateur license had been set aside. As such the FCC did not grant him an Amateur license nor any authorization to use the amateur frequencies.

In closing, it found that Gerritsen is fully liable for a monetary forfeiture of in the amount of ten thousand dollars. It gave him 30 days fropm the October 5th release of its decision to pay. If he fails to do this in thr alloted or the FCC says it may be referred to the Department of Justice for collection. ENFORCEMENT: TO MANY CALL SIGN CHANGES

The FCC wants to know why a California couple has been requesting and then cancelling call signs. The agency's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, explains:

Duckworth: "NN6AA, Edward Beluso, of Redding, California, has been asked to provide information on about a dozen licenses that have been granted and canceled since June of 1999. These filings raise questions as to whether these are being filed in order to block future assignments of the call signs and the legitimacy of those that were issued for clubs.
At the same address, WA6JAN, Janet Beluso, has also been asked to supply information regarding five call signs."
This is Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, reporting."

The FCC gave the Beluso's the usual amount of time to respond.

RESCUE RADIO: KKOB TOWER HIT BY HOT AOR BALLOON

KKOB-AM radio in Albuquerque, New Mexico, had to shut down its 50,000-watt transmitter for several hours on Sunday, October 10th. This, after a hot air balloon got tangeled at the top of the stations 700 foot high broadcast tower. Amateur Radio Newsline's Norm Seeley, KI7UP, has more:

According to news reports, Bill Chapel was flying the hot-air balloon when it blew into the tower near a park where the Albuquerque International Balloon Fiesta was being held. The lines supporting the airships canopy got wrapped around the triangular shaped tower.
This left the gondola resting up against the antenna structure with the straps securing it to the balloon tangled in the antenna structure.

Chapel, and passengers Aaron Whitacre, 10, and Troy Wells, 14, successfully got out of the gondola and onto the tower. They then began the long climb down the antenna structures ladder.

At the 100 foot level they were met by a group of trained rescue worker. The rescue team secured the trip with safety gear, and helped them into a utility truck bucket for the last of the trip back to mother Earth. Tower maintenance crews then got to work removing the remainder of the balloon from the antenna structure.

Nobody was hurt in the incident and the station resumed normal operation once the remnants of the balloon were removed.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, Norm Seeley, KI7UP, in Scottsdale, Arizona.

The Federal Aviation Administration and National Transportation Safety Board are reportedly investigating the incident. The Albuquerque International Balloon Fiesta has been flying since 1972. (Published news reports)

RESCUE RADIO: WAYS TO WARN

Scott Marks, KI4GGU, says via the WIA News that Israel has developed an emergency public notification system called Silent Radio. This is a regular FM station that remains silent until some kind of emergency situation takes place. Once it receives an alert, it takes to the air to issue any required information to the Israeli public which already knows where to tune in. Kind of the the old Emergency Broadcast System we had here in the U-S-A before the 1990's upgrade to E-A-S that is supposed to warn a lot more people but is also requires special decoding equipment and is very complex. (WIA News)

RESCUE RADIO: WAY NOT TO WARN

Meantime, over in the U-K, Bob Sayers, G8IYK says the Emergency Planning community in the that nation has tried to have something like the Israeli alert system established for many years. Unfortunately, they always get the same response from government officials ewho say that it would be prohibitively expensive.

In fact not so long ago the nation-wide warning siren network, set up in World War 2 but retained and improved upon throughout the Cold War period, was scrapped. The reason was the same. No money to maintain it. (WIA News)

RADIO HEALTH REDUX: IS THERE A CANCER CONNECTION TO HIGH POWER RADIO TRANSMISSIONS

A follow up to last weeks story on the risks associated to R-F exposure from living near a high power broadcast station. Bob Gonsett, W6VR, points a report in his C-G-C Communicator that discused the same subject. Amateur Radio Newslie's Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, reports:

Two years ago an Italian study found death rates from leukemia increased dramatically for residents living within two miles of Vatican Radio's powerful array of transmitters in Rome. Now, as reported last week, Wired Magazine says that Korean researchers have looked at the death rates in 10 regions with AM radio transmitting towers broadcasting at more than 100 kilowatts. They compared them with control areas without transmitters, and claim to have found substantially higher cancer mortality rates among those who lived within two kilometers of the high power transmitters.

But says the CGC Communicator, the problem with the Vatican study is that it was relatively small in the size and lacked exposure data. Also, the new Korean study has not even been published. As a result, this is all speculative and based on some rather sketchy pre release information.

Clouding the picture is the statement of Epidemiologist Mary McBride of the British Columbia Cancer Agency also reported in Wired magazine. It quotes Mc Bride as saying that there have been many studies like these, and they just are not very convincing.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, in Los Angeles.

The bottom line to all this. Its going to take more than just scientific speculation to know foe certain if there is any affect at all from living close a a high power broadcast transmitter. (CGC)

WORLDBEAT: SA HAMS DID NOT LOOSE 2.4 OR 5.6 GHZ

South African Amateurs have not lost access to either the 2.4 and 5.6 GHz band. Its just a government typo. At least thats what South Africa Radio League president, Graham Hartlett, ZS6GJH, is saying ane he should know. Thats because he set out to investigate why both pieces of spectrum were not listed to that nations ham radio community.

Now Harlett says that he has in hand a communication from the nations radio regulatory body. It tells him that the 3.4 and 5.6 GHz allocations for amateurs had been accidentally omitted from the last publication of the band plan in the Government Gazette. Harlett was assured that this will be rectified in the next band plan publication. (WIA News)

THAT FINAL ITEM: THE HISTORY OF JOTA

And finally this week, its the time of year for Jota -- the scouts annual ham radio Jamboree on the Air. Last week we told you about the event as it is today. Now we take a look back in time to the beginning of the Jamboree with John Williams, VK2BUI.

Jamboree On The Air is the largest annual international event in the Guides and Scouts event calendar, when thousands of Girl Guides and Scouts from all over the world gather for a weekend to contact each other by radio, share ideas, participate in many activities, make friends and learn new skills.

Like a lot of successful ventures, JOTA had a small beginning, and whilst Scouting utilised radio in its program in some areas for a number of years, it was not accepted as an official part of the Scout program until the 1957 Jubilee Jamboree at Sutton Park Coldfield, near Birmingham in the United Kingdom.

It was here that a very successful amateur radio station was set up, but amongst the sixty plus operators present, only two were in uniform, one of whom Mr Les Mitchell G3BHK.

As this was the only activity at the Jamboree not conducted with a full Scouting Staff he was rather disappointed, feeling that in the true spirit of such a wonderful international Scout activity all Scouters should have been involved in the manning and operation of this station.

His concern led him to call a meeting of overseas Scout radio Amateurs present at the Jamboree and during one of their meetings they decided to keep in touch with each other on air and ensure their availability, if possible, as station operators at future World Jamborees.

Initially one day a year was proposed, but thinking this over later Their nominated Organiser Les Mitchell suggested they consider inviting amateur radio operators throughout the world to join them instead in a special weekend each year for a Jamboree on the Air at which, hopefully, Scouts and leaders would be able to talk to each other throughout the world keyclowns:

are what some hams or whatever who kinda take it upon themselves to police the airwaves call people who take part in keydowns and has become anyone who talksabout amp use on 11 meters or cb channels or discusses more than legal power on cb??
from what i understand some of them have had run-ins on air and/or in person?
anti keyclowns:
are the ones who search for them and turn them in to the fcc by filing complaints?
homosexual talk:
this is brought on by trolls and puppets of one or possibly both factions??

i enjoy posts by both sides when on topic

That's 12 amps @ xxMHz -- don't forget about skin effect. At 30 MHz with 12 AWG copper you will end up radiating about 22 watts per foot in the form of heat. And to put that into perspective, most small soldering irons are 15-30 watts.

Just a question. would you be willing to testify in a court of law that you did, in fact receive these threats? If not, not much I can use. if so, I will be in contact. this e-mail address is valid, so, drop me a line with a valid telephone contact number. I also just got off the phone, with a friend of mine, at the Detroit office of the FBI. This person told me, if i could produce the evidence that this person did threaten me. they would get the court order to see who this person is, from buckeye cable. then go pay him a visit. and if it was proven it was him, he'd be looking at some harsh jail time.

bait and boat :)

Must be one of those frankenfish LOL

Don't sweat it; there are folks with legitimate questions and other with legitimate answers. In between those posts are the 90% of the junk that tends to fill this newsgroup. Don't worry; the ham newsgroups aren't much better.

As far as the language and various sexual references, bear in mind that you will be dealing with some 30, 40, 50, and 60 year old adolescent minds in here :))

Best regards from Rochester, NY

I call it like I see it. And what I see lately is Doug, "George", Landshark, yourself, and a few others trolling each other. In fact, it's hard -not- to see it because that's been a good 90% of the posts in recent weeks.

Hey, if you like trolling that's your business. I've done it myself, and I troll Twisty for fun every now and then. Senselessness can be fun once in a while. But everything should be taken in moderation, and sifting through the current barrage of keyclown-this and crisco-that to find something interesting and on-topic is..... well, let's just say that it's almost as much fun as passing a gall-stone.

I think I'll just leave it. Apparently it takes an meter which I know they'll just create another nic and do the same, but after a while you have to do something.

> So have you ever heard the phrase, "Please don't feed the trolls"?

Sure have, thanks! But one could say the same to you ;)

Off topic, what do you think about those troops in Iraq that refused to transport the fuel? Would you have done the same in Beirut? or for that fact anywhere else? Complain of inferior weapons, vehicles you, WWII most of the regular troops still had Bolt action rifles until late 1942, early 1943, they didn't stop fighting then.

Oh boy, you just opened up a can of steroid-enhanced worms.....

I don't have the specific details of what happened in Iraq so I can't really say if their actions were justified. But here's a few things that people should know:

First, it's not a soldier's right to understand the reasons behind a command decision. They may be justified or not. But if the order is legal then they -must- follow the order -- period. Even if they know it means people will die.

Second, a soldier can't pick-and-choose which orders they are going to follow. In war, the consequences of an order can be absolute -- i.e, people can (and do) die. Therefore, -authority- must be absolute.
Refusal to obey a legal order, whether the order was based on sound judgment or not, -must- be punished or that authority is compromised.

Third, the chain of command is not a one-way street. If a subordinate has a beef then he/she can "request mast", which is basically asking for change, validation, clarification, or whatever through the chain of command. They can request mast as high into the command structure as they feel necessary, and nobody can prevent them from doing so.
They may piss off a few people in the process, but that's just a daily part of military life anyway.

And if they -do- request mast, that doesn't put a Habeas Corpus on the command in question. They must still carry out the order even if they haven't yet received a satisfactory answer to their complaint. If they die then there remains a record of their complaint and who heard it. And that establishes accountability if the command decision was made with poor judgment.

So contrary to Ollie North's opinion, the military does not operate by blind obedience. There -are- checks and balances, and there -are- remedies for injustices. But there is -NO- justification for refusing a direct and legal order.

Now if the order was illegal then they had the right to refuse the order. In fact, (and again contrary to Ollie's opinion) they had a -legal obligation- to refuse the order, -and- to report it to the proper authority (even if those orders came directly from VP Bush under a blanket authorization from John Lehman!).

As far as Beirut is concerned, I don't have direct knowledge of any instances where illegal orders were made. But anything is possible, right? Maybe the US ordered the assassination of a certain militant that was a US citizen, or maybe opium was being purchased to sell as heroin in the US to finance a war in Central America, or maybe weapons were being laundered just like mob money, or maybe the unofficial policy in Lebanon wasn't to keep the peace but to incite violence in order to maintain a state of lawlessness under which certain illegal orders could be carried out with impunity. But rest assured that if there was -evidence- of such illegal orders that such evidence would have been forwarded to the proper authorities -despite- its "security" classification.

I hope that helps clarify things.

BTW, I've never heard that most troops had bolt-action rifles at the beginning of WWII, but I do know that there was a weapon shortage at some point and recruits were being trained with mop handles. That story came from my great Uncle who did some island-hopping in the Pacific.

Hello R.F. Burns:

From what I hear its a circuit that allows the carrier to be placed at 1 watt, and then the radio modulates up to 50 watts PEP.

But I could be wrong about this?!?!/!?

I am sure some of the other guys know all about this.

I have always thought that using another Modulator Audio IC (that is heat sink mounted) and another Modulation transformer would be a neat radio project. Then you could upgrade to more modulation power by driving larger power transistors, and so on. So having a high power modulator modulate a linear amplifier would be a neat project to do.
Wounder how it would sound, as compared to crappy class c amps out there?

But nothing replaces the sound and warm smell of a old Johnson Rig like the Valiant with 3 each 6146's in class C, being plate modulated by a pair of 6146's in class B push pull. Driving the Death and Dooms Day Thunder Bolt 2KW Amp! Sitting around the room on a rainey day shootin skip and having a warm cup of coffee in my Santa Claus Coffee Cup.
Hearing your audio rattle the tubes and transformers, ahhhhhhhhh yeah!

http://www.aade.com/hampedia/johnson/johnson1.htm
http://www.radioing.com/collins/http://www.w9wrl.com/wrl/index.html

Heres a few Biiiitcheeeeeeen web sites!!

Then again the ol Gates 1 KW AM Broadcast stations with a pair of 4-400's in class C, being plate modulated by another pair of 4-400's. It made the floor sag, hehehehehehe. The National NC303 sitting to the side with a Rub-Goldburg TR Switch. Oh man the memories........

Man I know, or at least I thought I had a few photos..........

Hey Chuck, if you want a floppy full of similar posts and emails, have your lawyer email me. I have 5 year's worth of fun from fools,,much of it originating from Dogie and even a few who colluded with him.

The first post refers to amplifier and freebanding and all radio related activities. The topic of such is completely legal, despite your repeated and clowning errors of claiming such is illegal.
The second post, which you deliberately isolated and removed from its original context to change its inherent meaning by deleting the post to which it was a response, focuses on direct threats made by Dogie against users of this group, whih indeed are illegal. No contradiction, just more of your interpretive incompetency based on your deficit in

The main weapon in 1936 was the Springfield 1903, 30.06 bolt action rifle. The same year, the military adopted the M1 garand, of course a few years later, very few had been produced for the military and even less had been issued to the troops. When war broke out, they then kicked production into full swing, but it took time to produce, pack, ship, issue to the troops.

Isn't it true that they were afraid to issue the best weapon, the BAR, cuz they were afraid the Germans would get ahold of it and clone it?

Speaking of inferior weapons, how about the M16-A2? We got those the last year I was in and they SUCKED! The -A1 was ok, but the -A2 had an "improved" rear sight that jammed with nothing more than a grain of sand, the handgards were round taking away that nice flat bottom that was so great for offhand shooting, the barrels were beefed up but only forward of the front sight making it muzzle-heavy, the bottom ports were plugged on an already mediocre flash-suppressor..... basically they took a halfways decent rifle and made it bad.

Then there are those new kevlar helmets. Aside from the Nazi design that cut down on your prehiprial vision, the webbing dug into the top of your head and were a lot heavier than the good ol' steel pots. On top of that, you couldn't do anything with the new helmets except wear them -- the steel pots were great because they were good for cooking, washing, puking, etc, etc.

And the flack jackets.... they could stop a .22 LR but that's about it. There were fiberglass liners available for them but were never issued. The jackets with the liners could stop a .45 ACP and 9mm at point-blank range, and even stopped a 30-30 at about 100 yards (we went plinking one day in the Mojave).

There were a lot of -great- weapons, too. Like the M-60. It had an occasional runaway problem (trigger would get stuck) and maybe a cookoff now and then, but as long as your ammo-man kept squirting CLP onto the barrel and into the action you could chew up belt after belt after belt. The old .45 was great, too. It kicked, it was loud, and the hammer would cut the web between your thumb and finger, but I would gladly accept those minor discomforts when facing a combatant at close range than put my trust in a relatively puny 9mm.

Anyway, I'm done ranting for today.

So selling cb amps, illegal cb, etc is OK, and threats are not OK,

Levon

Music by Elton John Lyrics by Bernie Taupin Available on the album Madman Across The Water ï¿½

Levon wears his war wound like a crown
He calls his child Jesus `Cause he likes the name
And he sends him to the finest school in town
Levon, Levon likes his money
He makes a lot they say Spend his days counting
In a garage by the motorway
He was born a pauper to a pawn on a Christmas day
When the New York Times said God is dead
And the war's begun
Alvin Tostig has a son today
And he shall be Levon
And he shall be a good man
And he shall be Levon
In tradition with the family plan
And he shall be Levon
And he shall be a good man
He shall be Levon
Levon sells cartoon balloons in town
His family business thrives
Jesus blows up balloons all day
Sits on the porch swing watching them fly
And Jesus, he wants to go to Venus Leaving Levon far behind
Take a balloon and go sailing While Levon, Levon slowly dies

Hi Jay,

Wonder why somebody would want that. Is it only the sidebands that peak at 50 watts? Seems like this would be like a double sideband signal if the carrier was below the noise level. Just wondering. I always like to learn something about the hobby.

I agree with you about the tube rigs.

1922. Finding old CB friends

I'd really like to find an old childhood friend, Lyle Dean Whitacker, who got me started in CB radio back in the mid 60's. He was a year older than me, but his friendship and help with CB radio was an experience that I'll always be grateful for. Lost touch with him, and hope he might be on one of these sites. Lyle, from South Bend Indiana (Brummitt Lane)...it's your former childhood neighbor, Steve Bennett, looking for you. theortician@hotmail.com thanks!

Hello R.F. Burns:

Yeah "Black Cat" Amps. More memories of the old days.

Back in the 60 to 70's, Ray (Buckshoot)one of the locals in the San Fernando Valley, bought a used Ford Bronco 4x4, jeep like truck.

It came with a CB Radio and a old tube type VHF tunable receiver. It wasn't real pretty looking but was functional and ran good. Ray called me up and wanted help with the old Gonset Tunable VHF Receiver to tune in on the local Police and Fire frequencies. We did hear the fire department but not the LAPD,as I think they went to the UHF Band at that time.

We also noticed that when the CB radio was keyed it took out the VHF Receiver, it de-sensed it so you couldn't hear the VHF signals when the radio was keyed. Looking all over to see what this was, we didn't see anything out of the ordinary to cause the VHF radio to go dead when the CB radio was keyed. My weakie squikey mobile setting next to Rays Bronco didn't even phase the old VHF Gonset Receiver.

Closer examination showed us that the Bronco had a Black Cat 75 Linear Amplifier mounted to the Bronco's Firewall inside the engine compartment. And a Aluminum sheet metal was made to be a heat shroud protecting the Black Cat 75 Linear Amplifier. Rather well discised I must say. After tuning the Plate and Load of the Black Cat Linear Amplifier the interference to the VHF receiver went away. And Ray was a big strap with a massive 50 watts of output power.

Ray use to go Deer Hunting with his Bronco in the San Gaberial Mountains behide our little town. You could hear Ray (Buckshot) and Jim (Jimmy Cat) for miles and miles when they where on top of the mountains. Many a skip station would try to get to Ray, but he didn't answer just to irrate eleveone else.

But the antics between these two was a priceless entertaiment show at all times.....

I have a Uniden 510XL that I would like to use to listen without the mic attached. When I unplug the mic I get no audio. I rarely talk and don't have much room in my car so I would like to leave the mic unplugged unless I am using it.

Anyone have an idea of a way to trick the radio into thinking the mic is attached? Or maybe another small (and cheap) CB that doesn't need the mic attached?

Thanks.

a desk power mic.

The construction hints lists it as 82 ohms. The web site resistor package lists it as 47 ohms. Hopefully they can clear this up for me. I'll post the results when I get a reply.

If you have an extra mic plug you can put a jump wire from the ground pin to the receive pin.

Hello DR. Death:

R4 and D2 make up the Bias voltage and current that is feed to the base's of RF Amplifier Transistors Q3 and Q4.

The resistance value of R4 will be a dead nuts on requirement. But may not really need to be a exact value, within a certain range. R4 resistance value was probably called out 47 Ohms as this will work.

I would use 4 each, 2 watt resistors wired in a parallel/series way to make a 8 watt resistor, as a 6 watt resistor is needed.

My simple diagram shows 4 each, 47 ohm resistor wired in a series parallel method. This allows the resistor to have the same value as a single resistor but 4 times the power rating.

Hello Larry:

Any mic can be wired to any radio. It may take a little doing tho.

I would want to know is the MC80 mic a mic that takes a voltage to operate, like 9 or 12 volts?

Some mic's have switches to move the VFO or memory channels up and down and these are not required to make the mic wic work. So not all the wires will be used.

Looking at the diagrams would help.

Hello DR. Death:

One other thing that could be done to get a feel for the Value of R4 is look at the other Motorola Engineering Bulletins, and see what they use for the resistor. 33 and 47 ohms looks like a good value.

One problem I see is that because this resistor needs to dissipate 5 to 6 watts, a lot of these resistors used are too small in there power rating. Thetas why the 8 watt series/parallel circuit works so well. And the 2 watt carbon Resistors can't be too expensive. See:

http://www.rfparts.com

You could have a 33 ohm and a 47 ohm resistors, and switch between them to see what what works best.

And of course you could always measure the current of the two transistors at .6 to .7 Volts applied at the Base and Emitter of the Q3 and Q4 Transistors. This with ohms law would tell the range of resistors used for the bias supply for a pair MRF242 Transistors.

This is incorrect.
The resistance value of R4 will NOT be a dead nuts on requirement.

If you are really concerned you will want to use 5% or better resistors, which, can be hard to find in large wattage for cheap. If you want to burn a little money look into the dale power resistors which have an aluminum outer heatsink covering. Since this covering is sinked to ground it will also help with stray RF and may prevent some internal oscillations thus keeping harmonics down a tad.

Aint it the truth. They worship the AKC. The dummies are too stupid to see how it all fits the AKC plan. Of course, that chip we implanted in keyclown's peanut brains enables us to make them ignore even the clue that they are being controlled. LOL!

Yessiree..we took 'em to the vet, chipped 'em and set 'em free. Hmmm, lemme look at my GPS...yepper...mopeydopey is almost to the petro in Girard.

Thank you for your post. AKC had issued subliminal commands through your implanted chip, since we wanted new humor. It is always nice to see how well the chip implants work.

OK Chukkee...I guess it is time for you to call the FBI. Here it is, another AKC post.

Whatsamatta, Chukkee? You don't sic the Latin Counts or the Iron Coffins on people any more? You don't threaten to shoot people any more? Hmmm...hahahahha.

Recently you first said you were such a good Christian, etc that you "knew" I was going to hell. THEN, you sock puppeted a post full of gay slurs. Again, I prove AKC right without any effort at all on our part. Your own posts show that you are a phony Christian and a skulking sissy.

You are welcome. Now, get yourself to the Detroiter toilet and back to work, before we tell your pimp you are slacking.

By the way, would you please take down your biography? It is funny, but we would rather see some new stuff about your phony Christianity.

(NEWSGROUP, OCT. 20) "No amps, no auctions, no nothing," said Mopeydopey, " I might as well not even go to the trouble of being a criminal". Keyclowns all over America held hankies to their dribbling noses this week and cried tears of defeat. "I'm depressed, I need to sniff the cum stained jockstrap Doug mailed me" said Twithed, "I can't even post as I Am Not Ice anymore".

Meanwhile, "The AKC have driven me out" bleated self styled "amp god" Bill Eitner. "I don't understand why people who USED to be dedicated to the fine art of splattering 40 channels with poor harmonic filtering don't at least put up a fight. I mean, we are criminals by choice not by chance" said Eitner from his Alcatraz cell.

Eitner's unsavory liason with Tim Nebo also came to an abrupt end this week as Nebo left Galveston to join the famed homosexual performance troupe, Cirque De Sol-Gay.

But the biggest news of all is that offbeat anarchist and government-hater Twithed will post no more in rec.radio.cb. "No, it's not becuz of the saucer men" he chuckled, "It is because of Leland, Sparky, George, Dave, Jerry, Doug, and the rest of Team Voob.

They have finally worn me out" said the broad-beamed Gulf Coast amateur sailor and jockstrap collector. "You have no idea what it's like to be the subject of such a vast, AKC conspiracy dedicated to my undoing. I even tried bootlegging their ham callsigns on the freeband, but they pay no attention to my shenanigans. So that's it, I'm through. I'll be a pig farmer in some shithole like Des Moine before I go back to freebanding".

Thank you sweet little femininists for being so trainable. It is so much fun to rat out auctions and then come here and let you know who did it.

It is always a pleasure to bust keyclowns, so keep posting auctions.

Also, keep ranting and insulting the AKC members. It is a great measure of success to see the big mouths on here running their soup coolers about us, we appreciate it.

Our fame is enhanced by your hatred. Thank you.

The bulletin uses a 1N4997 diode for D2 and a 33 ohm for R4. The construction hints uses a MJE243 Transistor for D2 as they state the 1N4997 is no longer available and R4 as 82 ohms. The 63R resistor parts set has it at 47 ohms. So the choice I think would be either the 47 or 82 ohm.

I was able to find a 1N4997 replacement NTE5800 and might try it with the 33 ohm as the MJE243 will be a bit harder to install as it goes between the PCB and heat sink and has to have a spacer. Thanks for your input, if the 1N4997 doesn't work like expected I'll give the series parallel a try.

Not that I'm aware of--but you might try looking on eBay for some of the old call books published by International Crystal Manufacturing back in the early '60's. I've picked up quite a few of the old CB call books for just a buck or two--seems that no one is interested in them nowadays except those nostalgic for the early days of 11 meters.

It looks like the resistors were chosen based on the characteristics of the respective device, so keeping the match would probably be the best choice. IOW, use the 82 ohm resistor with the MJE243 and the 33 ohm resistor with the 1N4997.

>I was able to find a 1N4997 replacement NTE5800 and might try it with the 33

Avoid generic replacements. Unless it's reverse-referenced as the original component, it may not be a drop-in replacement and is not likely to have the same specifications as the original. Besides, using the MJE243 is, IMPO, a better choice than the 1N4997 for a couple reasons: First, as a diode it will have forward voltage drop (bias regulation) similar to the emitter-base characteristics of the power transistors (mainly because it -is- a power transistor); and second, because it will have a better thermal connection with the heat-sink providing bias regulation with improved thermal tracking. That is, of course, assuming you are able to mount it physically close to the power transistors. And when you mount it, use just a very thin film of heat-sink grease -- avoid the "more-is-better" mentality.

> Thanks for your input, if the 1N4997 >doesn't work like expected I'll give the series parallel a try.

Using multiple resistors is an excellent idea. If the 33 ohm resistor is used the power dissipated by the resistor will be slightly greater than the 5 watt rating specified -- it would be much better to have a resistor (or resistors) rated for 10 watts or more. Also, mount that resistor (as well as the base resistors R5 and R6) slightly above the board (1/8" to 1/4") or the heat will cook the board and the foil will fall off. The extra wire also helps dissipate heat.

There was also the suggestion to use a Dale, but that's really just a waste of money in this case -- the input impedance of the transistors is so low that feedback from stray RF isn't going to be a problem.

Another issue: While looking at the schematic I was suprised to see that there isn't a choke between the bias supply and the input transformer -- there -really- needs to be one there! At the very least, add a few beads on the wire from the center-tap of the input transformer. A nice torroid or hash choke would be even better.

Anyway, while you are building this thing, keep in mind that it is a very basic circuit (i.e, primitive, uninproved, bare-bones), so don't expect much. And yes, it -will- need a filter.

The MJE243 mounts close to the power transistors. The hints say to use a mica washer and coumpound. I was certainly a little concerned with using replacement 1N4997.

Hehhe...thank you too. I see the "loop back and repeat the same crap" program is properly installed in your chip. Of course, even without a chip it is all you can do.

BTW what's the budget on the project? Just curious.

Sorry, I wasn't trying to step on your toes. You probably didn't know that the input impedance of these transistors is about 1 ohm (with a little reactance), and I think you will agree that any pickup by this resistor (or other relatively short wiring in the low-impedance part of the circuit) isn't going to amount to squat. Regardless, any RF that happens to land on the center-tap of the input transformer will end up as common-mode signals that will be nulled at the output transformer.

The most likely cause of self-oscillitory feedback will probably come from the relay. Notice that one relay is used for both the input and output (both at higher impedance than the amp block), and that the armatures are long, parallel, and relatively close together. Scary!
Even Pride, the company that produced some of the worst CB amps ever, had enough sense to use two seperate relays.

I don't think they published CB callsigns but you can get old CB license information from the International Transcription Service (ITS, Inc.). For a fee, they will research the information you request. I think the fee is around $45/hour. I had them look up some old license information for me, it took about 15 minutes.

The fantastic "How to implant a control chip in YOUR pet keyclown" website!

Make your pet keyclown do all these things...

1. Sign you up for spam
2. Say nasty stuff in the NG
3. Make threats
4. Obsessively google your name over and over.
5. Cry because he discovers you are heterosexual

These and many more...The chip is 100% owner programmmable from the convenience of your Home PC. Your pet keyclown will do what you want immediately after his chip sends the instruction to his peanut brain.

The AKC has perfected this technology and it is 100% foolproof. It has to be foolproof so a keyclown can't remove it, since keyclowns are fools.

GET YOUR "TOTAL COMMAND AND CONTROL OF YOUR PET KEYCLOWN" Chip today, from your leader in AKC Technology...AKC Laboratories.

NOTE: Some keyclowns are so stupid that they do not even need the chip...look back on your keyclown pet candidate's last 100 or so NG posts, you may not even need the chip!

THE BPL FIGHT: AUSTRALIAN HAM DEVELOPS ON-LINE BPL IMPACT EVALUATION TOOL

A new tool to help hams evaluate the impact of Broadband over Powerline has just been made available on the Internet by an Australian radio amateur. Its based on the work of a European consortium that's trying to set a world standard for B-P-L radiation limits. Owen Duffy, VK1OD, is the ham who made it happen:

--

Current BPL technology works by conduction of signals in the radio frequency spectrum up to about 100 MHz. Existing power lines networks are not ideal RF transmission networks, they will radiate radio frequency energy causing interference to radio communications services, and they will be susceptible to interference from nearby transmitters -- radio or otherwise.

The European Committee for Electrotechnical Standardization, CENELEC, are developing a standard for "Electromagnetic emissions from access powerline communications networks". Access powerline communications networks are commonly termed Broadband over Power Lines or B-P-L.

The proposed CENELEC standard does not automatically apply globally, though countries like Australia draw heavily on international standards, such as CENELEC's for their own jurisdiction.

This proposed standard would set limits for the conducted energy and radiated energy of B-P-L systems. The radiation limit is specified for example as a field strength in dBuA/m in a measurement bandwidth at a specified distance on particular frequency, and its impact will not be immediately apparent to most radio users.

Do you know what the impact of +4dBuA/m in 9KHz at 3m is on your receiver?

The B-P-L Interference Evaluation Tool allows evaluation of the impact of B-P-L interference under the proposed CENELEC standard given a set of location / application specific parameters.

Go to the BPL Interference Evaluation Tool at www.vk1od.net/bpl and enter the details for your site and discover the impact. The URL again is www.vk1od.net/bpl .

Again, the VK1OD B-P-L Interference Evaluation Tool is on the web at www.vk1od.net/bpl. (WIA News)

THE BPL FIGHT: FCC RULE CHANGES TO PROMOTE BROADBAND

Back here in the United States, very little attention appears to have been paid to two other FCC actions amid last weeks FCC decision on BPL. But both are designed to help promote different forms of broadband Internet access. This is important because they will be giving Broadband Over Powerline a run for the corporate dollar profit. Amateur Radio Newsline's Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, has more:

In another vote taken at their October 14th meeting, the FCC loosened restrictions on fiber-optic networks built by local phone companies, encouraging them to make greater investments in so-called "fiber-to-the-curb" and "fiber-to-the-home" networks. According to the Commission, and as reported in a bulletin from C-Q, the ruling will encourage deployment of fiber optic broadband networks capable of delivering advanced data, video and voice service" by local telephone companies.

Prompted by the decision, several big telephone companies said they would move more rapidly to build fiber networks to homes. S-B-C says it now plans to provide 18 million households higher speed Internet services in two to three years, rather than five years as previously announced. . So far, Verizon Communications has been the most active in building residential fiber networks.

And there is more. The day after the BPL vote was taken, the FCC's Wireless Telecommunications Bureau announced a joint effort with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Rural Utilities Service. This, to advance the deployment of broadband wireless telecommunications across rural America.

Its called the "Rural Wireless Community VISION Program. Its purpose is to bring experts from both agencies into rural communities selected as models to help provide technical, financial and other assistance in launching wireless broadband services in those areas.

All of this adds up to a lot of competition for B-P-L from the day it gets going.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, in Los Angeles.

As we go to air, it is unclear whether either of these actions are efforts to promote multiple types of broadband, or, possibly a no confidence vote in the long-term potential of B-P-L.

More information on the program is available online at http://wireless.fcc.gov/outreach/ruralvision/index.html. (CQ)

RESTRUTURING: NEW UK INTERNET LINKING RULES

Across the Atlantic, some new procedures have been announced by United Kingdom radio regulator Ofcom. This, for the issuing Internet-linking Notices of Variation for U-K hams. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, is in Nottingham with more.

Following a period of consultation, the following new procedures have been agreed between Ofcom and the RSGB. All current Internet linking NoVs will expire on 31st December 2004. Existing NoV-holders and new applicants will be able to apply for new NoVs from 1st October. The three-month period between 1st October and 31st December will allow for the continuity of the present network to be maintained.

If you currently hold an Internet linking NoV and you wish to continue providing an Internet gateway beyond 31st December now is the time to apply for your new NoV. If you do not apply for a new NoV, the service you currently provide to the amateur radio community must cease on 31st December.

The method of application is totally web-based, and further details and a series of 'FAQs' can also be found on the RSGB website.

Jeramy Boot, G4NJH

Here in the U-S-A we take Voice over I P interconnects for granted. In most other nations hams are required to get special permission to connect their stations to the Internet. (GB2RS)

RESCUE RADIO: HAMS SUB FOR PHONES IN SOCAL HOSPITAL OUTAGE

Its ham radio to the rescue once again. This, when a construction accident takes out telephones, faxes, Internet and all other outside wireline communications at a southern California hospital. Amateur Radio Newsline's Joe Moell K0OV has the details.

Imagine that you're a nurse in the Intensive Care Unit of a hospital. You need to contact a doctor at his home or office, but you can't get an outside line on the phone at your nurses' station. That's what happened on October 6 at Tustin Hospital Medical Center in southern California. At a construction site next to the hospital, earthmoving equipment dug up 50 feet of telephone trunk lines, severing a 400-pair cable and damaging a 200-pair cable.

Following its previously-drilled procedures, the hospital's Director of Safety contacted the Hospital Disaster Support Communications System -- HDSCS -- an ARES group dedicated to the support of medical facilities in Orange County. In 30 minutes, the first ham had gotten through rush-hour traffic and arrived at the hospital to set up a communications link to the outside.

As more hams arrived, they deployed to the emergency Command Post, switchboard, Medical/Surgical unit, Pediatric unit, Intensive Care Unit, and the new Emergency Department. Meanwhile, the group's leader, April Moell WA6OPS, and two other base station operators prepared to make and receive phone calls in behalf of the THMC. Message traffic began to flow immediately after the operators got on station, as hospital staff members re-established links with their patients' physicians on the outside.

WA6OPS: "Go ahead, W6KOS."

"Please advise ICU, I got the service, it was a message machine. I put a message on that machine to call the number that you gave. I also gave it my number. If there's any other way they want us to try to get hold of him, we'll do it. Please advise them that we have called."

W6KOS: "Will do, W6KOS."

When phone company workers stated that repairs would take at least six hours, HDSCS began calling more members to provide relief to the first responders. By 9:30 AM the next morning, when the last telephone pair was spliced and the outage was declared to be over, four shifts of HDSCS operators had worked within the facility. Twenty-four hams participated in all.

This was the 85th time that HDSCS has activated to provide support when telephones failed or overloaded at hospitals, for reasons ranging from equipment failure, to cut cables, to natural disasters such as earthquakes, floods, and wildfires. It was the fifth activation so far in 2004. Each of the 80 members has his or her own Go-Kit, ready to take to any of the 34 supported hospitals to establish communications.

For more information on HDSCS -- and how hams in your community can organize to provide rapid response like this to hospitals -- point your Web browser to www.hdscs.org. Those are the initials for Hospital Disaster Support Communications System, followed by dot-org. From southern California, this is Joe Moell K-zero-Oscar-Victor, for Amateur Radio Newsline.

Among the hams responding to this emergency were Newsline's 2003 Young Ham of the Year Jay Thompson W6JAY and his father Richard, WA6NOL. They, and all of the others who volunteered are another good example of Amateur Radio ready and able to step in when commercial lines of communications fail. (K0OV, ARNewsline™)

RESCUE RADIO: STUDY SAYS THAT CELL PHONES IN HOSPITALS MAY PRESENT RELATIVELY FEW RFI HAZARDS

Cellular telephones may not pose the big risk in hospitals that was once thought. At least according to Dr. John Halamka who is the chief medical information officer for the Harvard Medical School.

According to Dr. Halamka, three years ago the school held a conference on the subject of hospital versus cellular telephone RFI issue. Attending were some 100 engineers, the Food and Drug Administration, wireless providers and businesses.

At that meeting the group determined that cell phones only pose a threat if they are within three feet of medical equipment. So, says Dr. Halamka, the current widespread hospital restrictions on cell phone use are probably greatly overblown except at locations where phones may audibly disturb patients or staff.

So will this report ease restrictions against cellular phone use in hospitals? Probably not because no study can cover all eventualities and most hospital administrators feel it better to safe than sorry.

COORDINATION: SERA RESCINDS MANDATORY TONE POLICY

According to the Repeater Users Internet remailer, the South Eastern Repeater Association has rescinded a controversial mandatory tone access policy enacted last summer. One that would have required tone receive and transmit on all new FM voice repeaters now, and on existing repeaters by July of 2006. Postings to the remailer say that numerous complaints lead the SERA Board of Directors to repeal the policy at a meeting on October 4th. (Repeater Owners / Users Remaler)

ENFORCEMENT: FLAT SCREEN TV FOOLS RESCUE SATELLITE

An Oregon resident has been told he could face a $10,000 fine if he continues to use a new flat screen television set that is radiating a high power spur on the International Distress Channel of 121.5 MHz. This, after an October 2nd visit by a contingent of local police, civil air patrol and search and rescue personnel.

Chris van Rossmann of Corvallis owns the year old Toshiba flat screen T-V. Unknown to him, the set was radiating a signal that was strong enough to be heard by the orbiting Sarsat Cospas search and rescue satellite. From there it was relayed the Air Force Rescue Center at Langley Air Base in Virginia which activated a search.

Van Rossmann found out about his broken television set when the search team knocked on his door. They were expecting to find a malfunctioning portable emergency transponder like those carried on boats and in light plans. Instead their T-hunting gear lead them to the college students T-V.

This is not the first time that an errant piece of ground based electronic gear has fooled the Sarsat Cospas rescue satellite. About 12 years ago the crystal oscillator in an inadequately shielded broadcast graphics machine brought a similar response to a production studio in New Jersey. In that case the Ampex Digital Optics unit was quickly retired from service.

Van Rossmann is faring a lot better. Toshiba has contacted him and offered to provide him with a replacement set, for free of charge. (Published reports)

ENFORCEMENT: SANTA CRUZ PIRATE SHUT DOWN BY FORCE

Government agents have shut down another unlicensed broadcaster. On September 29th agents of the U.S. Marshals Service served a warrant on a Santa Cruz, California pirate radio station.

The target was Free Radio Santa Cruz, an FM station running 35 to 40 watts of power while offering round-the-clock music, activism and other local programming.

The marshals, along with agents of the Federal Communications Commission, dismantled the station's equipment and carted it away in a pickup truck. The warrant bore no names, listing as defendant any and all radio station equipment used in connection with the transmissions.

Those running the station face the possibility of further punitive action in the form of hefty fines and even time in jail. The search warrant gave the station operators 20 days to respond in court. The value of the equipment seized is estimated at $5,000, including the antenna agents removed from the roof.

COMMUNICATIONS LAW: TELEMARKETERS LOOSE IN SUPREME COURT

The Supreme Court has turned away a challenge to the federal do-not-call registry. The ruling came on Monday, October 4th and upholds the lower court ruling that says the list does not in any way violate telemarketers rights to freedom of speech.

Under a federal law passed in 2003, telemarketers face fines of up to $11,000 if they call people who sign up for the registry unless they have recently done business with them. Charities, those conducting polls and callers on behalf of politicians are exempt. (Published reports)

ALERT: POSSIBLE E-MAIL SCAM TARGETING HAM RADIO

If you get an e-mail with a subject line saying Golden Trust telling you that you have won a lot of money, and its from hamemergency at some unknown dot com, toss it. It may well be another Internet scam targeted to Amateur radio.

Ray Shatzel, W2XC, says over the Internet that he received such a solicitation recently. It told him that he had won $1,500,000 in the Lottery Winners International program held on the July 7th of this year.

Curious, Ray checked it out on the fraud watch international dot com website. There he found out that it is nothing more than another of the many e-mail scams aimed at getting people like you and me to part with personally identifiable information that could be used in an identity theft scheme. They will also ask for payment of taxes, legal fees or other charges before the winnings can be released. People who fall for it loose what they send in and maybe a lot more.

Our thanks to W2XC for posting this warning to the Internet . He's one of the good guys who took the time to find out and to pass along the information so that nobody in the ham radio community gets stung. (via Internet)

HAM RADIO HELP: ARRL JOINS HOLIDAY TOY DRIVE

The ARRL is joining with the United Way in a project to brighten the lives of kids who lost everything in the recent hurricanes that ravaged Florida.

Thats right Don. The ARRL is joing forces with a special United Way drive aimed at brightening the coming holidays for kids in central Florida who might not otherwise be able to enjoy the season. They are the youngest victims of the fall hurricanes that ravaged the area. Suddenly living out of a tent or car.

To help these kids, hams nationwide are being asked to purchase a new child's toy and send it to this special United Way campaign. Be sure to include a QSL card or 3x5 file card showing your name and callsign.

Send your donated toy before Thanksgiving to Ham Radio in care of the The United Way White Dove Project at 50 Kindred Street, Suite 207 in Stuart, Florida. The zipcode is 34994.

As we have often said, children are the future of the nation and the world. They, more than any others, really deserve your support.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF.

Again, between now and Thanksgiving, purchase a new child's toy. Send it with a QSL card or 3x5 showing your callsign to Ham Radio, in care of The United Way White Dove Project, 50 Kindred Street, Suite 207, Stuart, FL 34994. We will and we hope that you will too. (ARRL)

Club Secretary Thomas Carlsson, AB5CQ reported that due to revisions made in Amateur Service licensing requirements by the Saudi Arabia Communications and Information Technology Commission, operations were no longer possible.

The HZ1AB callsign has already been reissued to Bandar Salah AL-Harby. Carlsson says that the clubs QSL manager, Leo Fry, K8PYD still has all the logs and will process any outstanding QSL card requests. (WIA News)

THAT FINAL ITEM: HAMVENTION 2004 THROUGH TEENAGE EYES

And finally this week, its the Dayton Hamvention as you have never seen it before. This is because its through the eyes of the young. And while we can't show you the pictures here, we can bring you some of the sound:

Sara K3OOO: "So you are probably thinking, OK I'm into this, but how do I get my license? Well, there lots of stuff. There's study guides. Real cheap. Real easy. You go home. You study for a while and do take your test and you pass and you get your license. No Internet. No wires required."

That's 15 year old Sara Saeger, K3OOO, who, along with 18 year old Trevor Conroy, W7TDC, are hosts of a new video about Hamvention 2004 produced for Icom America by of John Webb, W7NWH. But this show is not a commercial for Icom brand ham radio gear. In fact, its as if John borrowed a bit from Cole Porter's grand old Broadway musical.
The one whose title is "Anything Goes":

Trevor W7TDC: "Right over here we have DX Engineering, a manufacturer of components that actually allows you to build your own antenna. Antennas can be big. Antennas can be small. But theres one thing thats true about all of them. They all get your signal in the air."

--

Thats the other half of the anchor team and if Trevor sounds excited about building antennas it's because he knows just how much fun it can be. And while Sara and Trevor are our guides, they are not only young people in the new Icom show. Meet Rebekah Dorff, WG4Y, of Alabaster, Alabama:

Rebekah W4GY: "Ive been a ham since I was 8. I got my Tech when I was 8, my Extra when I was 9 and then I got my DXCC when I was 10 and then I got appointed as the Assistant Section Manager this year."

The bottom line. This is a new world of Amateur Radio and a lot of young people are getting excited about it once they find out just how much fun it can be. Thats because it gets you away from a computer screen and gives you new friends all over the world:

--

Unidentified youngster: "Hopefully I will get my license today and I will finally be able to talk to Russia."

If you are one of those who really care about the future of ham radio and want to see what it looks like through Sara and Trevor eyes, then go to www.icomamerica.com/amateur/video and have a look for yourself. Better yet, have your kids -- or your friends kids watch the show with you. Once you do, we guarantee that none of you will ever view ham radio the same way -- ever again.

Our thanks to Ray Novak, N9JA, and the fine folks at Icom America for funding this important new ham radio video and making it available on-line. Again that URL is www.icomamerica.com/amateur/video on the World Wide Web. (ARNewsline™)

I'm pretty sure I should be able to do this for $75 or less. I've had the 454s in a drawer for about 15 years. I have most of the switches, caps, resistors, diodes and transistors. The heatsink was a freebie. I'll build my own enclosure. SO239s robbed from old radios. Really the only things left to buy is the relay, the resistor in question, and the transistor. So far I only have $33 in it.

It appears as if an S9 interference signal would be a common occurrence if BPL was present in your neighborhood.

Looking into buying the Cobra NW29 CB for my rig. Any pros and cons and/or suggestions? Need something easy to read at night, something that will fit in my cubbyhole, and something with a little mic gain to get out ok. Weather and instant 9 are ok, but not a priority, as I run with a Bearcat scanner and 2m rig as well. Thanks in advance guys.

According to the calculator BPL only needs to be within 5 miles to be discernible.

through the course of history all teams have made crap decisions regarding players. sox are no different. there is a sort of cap in mlb where the owners pay a luxury tax over a certain dollar amount in yearly salaries. george could give a crap about the tax as he has his ship yards and if that goes belly up then all he has to do is cry to the federal govt and they'll bail him out.

Very obedient, Thank you. Now get to the vet and get chipped. We want you to post more often. There already isnt anything you can do to stop, but the chip will make it more fun for AKC. Say you are on a vacation somewhere and have forgotten all about the NG...hehe...We can then transmit a command, you drive to the nearest public web access, and post some more stuff.

Go get chipped, sissy boy.

By the way...getting a lot of approving emails about the chips...other pet keyclowns are also under control now.

The theory is that Keyclowns are illegal CBers, and Antikeyclowns those who oppose illegal CB. However, that is all just a cover for the truth. Some people are just hell bent against CB and those who use it - as demonstrated by their inability to post CB related messages, and their use of the term "keyclown" being aimed at anyone they dislike - without any proof of any kind that they use any illegal CB of any kind.

The homosexual hate messages are just the physical manifestation of the mental problems within the minds of those who hate some people so much that they will chase them around trying to anoy them.
Rather than trying to make their own lives better and more enjoyable, they wish to make other people as unhappy and mentally unwell as themselves.

Although they try to mask what they are with some claim to respect for the law, they are often unmasked as their own criminal activities or "brushes" with the FCC or police are made public.

That being said, there are some on this group who are pro-legal, some who are against laws restricting freedom of communications, and others who walk the line between - believing that the law is often an ass, and may not always be technically correct.
For example, distance rules. In America, you have a "No DX" rule. If you do not reply to a signal, does that mean it did not go over that distance? This law is often seen as a technically unsound and legally unenforceable law.

Here in the UK, when CB was first legalised, our Government opted to restrict distance with tech spec rather than trust to some "no DX" rule. What they did was to put in rules regarding antenna length and height from the ground.
Those who stuck within the law were radiating 4 Watts of RF at a height well below that of radio and TV equipment, and often caused interference.
It was soon worked out that, to avoid harmful interference and grief, the way to go was NOT what the law said. The rule was broken everywhere, and never enforced. Eventually, the government saw their error, removed the height rule and relaxed the length rule, allowing us bigger homebase antennas at any height within local planning rules.

Some say that stupid laws often needs a hard push before they will be changed, and illegal action becomes necessary - would the RA have removed that height rule if CBers had not proved it wrong by their illegal use?
Would the UK Government even be considering changing outdated and extremely sexist family law if it was not for the illegal actions of Batman and Robin?

Consensus here is that Drayton Mclane BETTER keep Beltran here, even if he has to sell his kids and wife! :-) Really though, if the Astros let him leave, Mclane deserves to be run out of town like we did to the Oilers and their fat, pompous owner and that toupee that ate his head.

I thought the same thing when Manny Ramirez was here, the Tribe offered him $120 million and Boston out bid them...rediculous!

Good luck, Beltran is the real deal.

Be honest now.....the oilers are gone because they truly stunk! No winning =

2075. Several "nice" contacts last night, this AM

The PA 313 mobile picked up 2 nice DX contacts last night; The island of Barbuda and Barbados....both while traveling up interstate 83. This morning I talked to about 5 stations in Europe...Belguim (3), Germany and Italy. Not bad for a rinky-dink, mud-duck mobile:-)

I'm thinking of actually putting a base station together at our weekend home this spring. I can't put an outdoor antenna up where I live and I think anything less than a stacked pair of beams would just piss me off:-)

Still waiting to hear from someone in here yet.....hopefully FLA will start rolling again and I can have a qso with Dr X and others:-) Again, mostly on 27.375 lsb, but I listen on 555 usb as well:-)

Not really, the fans did like the team, but the owner was too pig headed to

I remember one guy in Kentucky got pissed at hearing K4OKA and WB2OTK and the assholes down on that end of 75 meters and became an OO and actually is the one responsible for WB2OTK and Big AL the asshole getting into hot water...the guy put a couple hundred hours in with the FCC and ARRL doing what it took to get these pricks in hot water.....Hell they both read his name and call on the air out loud on several occasions because they had gotten so many OO cards from him....Thus verifying that they were the ones causing the interference and doing crap they werent supposed to be doing.

If they had never mentioned his name or call on the air ....

Nothing would have ever happened! They could have denied it all!....what a bunch of morons!

Anyway the ARRL pissed this guy off and he quit while working on getting LARDASS ND8V off the air....The ARRL needs to kiss his ass and try to get the guy back.....he was the only OO that ever got anything done. He was pretty much the sole evidence collector for the FCC at that time because the rest of the OO's in the US had their heads up their asses and pretended nothing was going on. Like they do now LOL!

ND8V is nothing but a piece of dog crap.

I take that back. I didn't mean to degrade dogs.

I'm surprise he has enough intelligence to find the power switch on his rig.

Isn't ND8V the foul mouthed ham from Michigan?

His audio sounds like he has a well used tampon in his mouth, while talking.

555 is an illegal keyclown frequency where gays gather.

Hey Don.
Yeah, the skip was seriously rollin' down here too. I didn't get to make many contacts tho 'cuz I still haven't gotten around to putting that thing back on freq. Maybe I'll work on it a little bit tmrw night.

I listen to 555U all the time. It's pretty active. 385U & L are also. I'll have to try 375L later and tmrw to see if I can here you up there.

He said he "LISTENS" to 555, you mental midget. That's not illegal. He could also be using a scanner to do that so listening doesn't even imply that his radio is capable of tx on that freq.

No chit Dick Tracy. I didn't say otherwise. Uhm, don't worry about my if you going to get a radio, go ahead and get a SuperStar 3900, it has echo, more channels...more watts...very easy to operate and only about 20 dollars more if not the same. Don't pay attention to the anti-CB, anti-amplifier shitheads that takes the fun out of communications. There are literally hundreds of radios that out perform the 29 Nightwatch, quality in it is OK, but I have seen to many problems in the last year with this model. Needle goes out, lose wiring, external jacks get lose easily and the receive (in my opinion) sucks. Right now I am using a HR2510 that I found for 100 bucks.

I did a few mods and it is one of the best all around radios I have EVER owned. BETTER than Galaxy 33-99's. I use a Sedelta Echo Master Plus mic and it is crystal clear. Mobile use is a Magnum S-3, no amp needed . 50 watts out the box, 185 bucks...AM/FM...I don't use ssb when I am on the road. My base to mobile....about 60 miles with out added amps..

Outgoing mail is certified Virus Free. I like that.

Mopeydopey, keykween, federal criminal, has chip implanted to make him post on command. Stalker: goes to peoples' houses he doesn't like and takes pictures and then posts them on the internet. Sissy ass who cried to get his way whith his mommy and daddy when he wanted toys and candy. Cries same way now when someone tells him he is an illegal keyclown. Soon to come: Webpage showing that mopeydopey's ip addy is the same one that signs people up for pornographic web sites. Another webpage soon to come that shows the pic of mopey's little 2 gerbil on a treadmill car and his license plate, along with scanned Ohio Bureau of Motor Vehicles report on owner of the vehicle in question. I am reliably told that one is going all over the internet.

Google HIM for the weird asshole value.

"Mopeydopey Bear"

I was on the outskirts of a little Ohio town,
Trying to get a blowjob from mopeyfag the keyclown.
The old CB was blaring away on channel one-nine
When there came that fag assed voice on the radio line.
And he said, "Breaker, one-nine, is anyone there?
It's mopey the queer, truckers, and I've got my asshole bare."

Well, I keyed the mike and I said, "Well, you got it,Mopey queer."
And the little punk's voice came back on the air.
"'Preciate the break. Wanna stick yer pekker in my end?"
We discussed his pricing, and then he began:

"Now, I shouldn't bug you with my faggot assed fluff, Mom said "I suck off the truckers, son, and 1 slut is enough."
But, you see, I get horny and I crave truckers dicks
'For a very low fee, I'll give a great suck and lick.'
I came back and told him to fire up that mouth
And I'd pump his gay lips as long as he'd like.

"This was my dad's radio," the little boy said,
"But he's doing five to seven for making 9 year olds give head.
Dad was turned out about a month ago.
Now he's trying to survive gang rape of his asshole.
Mom has to whore now to make ends meet
And I wanna help out and suck on your meat.
She says not to worry, that her cunt is still tight,
But I hear her crying sometimes late at night.
You know, there's one thing I want more than anything else to see.
Is a dripping and throbbing truck driver's pee pee,
Cuz, you see, my dad used to take me for rides on his bone
But I guess that's all over now since my daddy's gone."

Not one breaker came on the old CB
As that little faggot mopey talked gay sex with me.
I tried ignoring my hardon, but the lump just wouldn't stay down
As I thought about my gay lover back in Keyclown town.

"Dad was gonna pimp Mom and me later on this year.
Why, I remember him saying, 'Someday you will be a big faggot too, little mopey.'
But I know I'll never get to ride a trucker again,
But this old base will keep me in touch with my gay keyclown friends.
Mopeyedopey's gonna back on out now and leave you alone
'Cause it's about time for me to massage my bone.

But you give me a shout when you're passing through
And I'll sure be happy to talk gay sex with you you."

Well, I came back and I said, "Before you go ten-ten, What's your home-twenty, little CB friend?"
Well, he gave me his address and I never once hesitated
'Cause this hot load of jizz wasn't gonna be masturbated.
I turned that truck around on a dime
And headed straight for Mopeys house, 10-9.

And as I rounded the corner, boy, I got one heck of a shock-- Eighteen-wheelers were lined up for three city blocks!
Why, I guess every driver for miles around had caught Faggotmopey's call.
And that little gay boy was licking their balls.
For as fast as one driver would get off in his ass,
Another would carry him to his truck and pump him again.
Well, you better believe I took my turn at riding Mopeyedopey
I carried him to the sleeper, and pounded his tuffet.
And, buddy, if I never live to see happiness again
I want you to know I saw it that day, in the face of that little fag.

We took up a collection for him before his mama got home
And each driver said "Thank you for licking my bone".
He shook my hand with jizz on his chin
And said, "So long, trucker, I'll blow you again!"
I hit that interstate with shit on my dick Smiling and remembering little mopeyed puppet's lick.
"Breaker, one-nine," came a voice on the air,
"Just wanna say "fuck you" from Mama Mopey.
That bastard little queer won't split all that cash.
'And now I can't pay the rent from selling my gash.
I'll sign off now before I start to cry.
Next time please fuck me. Ten-four, and goodbye."

Mopeydope the keyclown is a gaping anal hole
With a jizz soaked face and dried cum lips
And a lust for men's hard pole

Mopeydope the keyclown is a fairy boy they say
He loves to blow and the children know
To stay the hell away

There must have been some cum stains
On the pink panties he found Cuz when he placed them on his head
He began to dance around

Mopeydope the keyclown is as queer as he can be
And Landshark says he sucks and licks
And just loves that gay pee pee

Mopeydope faggot as he can be Watch him visit truckstops Goes in the john to the glory hole
And there his lips he plops

Mopeydope the keyclown knew the sun was hot that day
So he found a spot in a parking lot
And sucked black dick all day

Down to the porn store
With a broom stick in his hand
He walked raight in to the viewing booths
And begged for gayboys' gland

He led the fags to the downtown bars
And right in to the back
He said let's play the gayboy way
Please let me lick your anal crack

Mopeydope the keyclown then hurried on his way
He waved goodbye saying gotta go get high
And get crammed in my can

Suckety Suck Suck
Suckety Suck Suck
Look at Mopeydope slurp

Suckety Suck Suck
Suckety Suck Suck
Without a single burp

Hi Leland, that is pretty crazy stuff. I still don't think ND8V is as big of a Ham Radio Embarrassment than N8WWM is. I didn't see anything about ND having a felony record or making the Rain Report for jamming repeaters..N8WWM is one very sick individual who has a court ordered shrink, and can't hold onto an ISP.

Or what about his abuse of the repeater system for which he was spanked by the rain report?

N8WWM guilty of FCC violations. According to the FCC, N8WWM, Dog Adair committed several violations over the air at the expense of the Toledo Amateur Radio Club by utilizing their repeater to break the law. The amateur club received a warning letter from the FCC concerning Adair's violations and were told to take steps to make certain the violations by Adair will not be repeated. Adair not only hurt the entire image of amateur radio with his inexcusable behavior, but damaged the reputation of yet another entity trying to further the good of amateur radio. It's a shame when bad apples like these make it so clubs can't even trust their own users to abide by the rules they were sworn to uphold. Adair is also an infamous presence on the internet. A google search of "N8WWM" reveals a peek into the world of the individual identified as Adair. In addition to FCC violations, Adair has, in the past, been accused of being a prolific spammer, breaking several internet laws and violating several terms of service agreements with internet providers.

Well I am liking the looks of the 3900, and I'm a ham radio operator licensed to run 10m so that might be just the radio I'm looking for - saw a website where for 30 bucks you can open it up for 11m and beef it up some (legally) - thanks for the tip there, George...wouldn't mind working 10m hf when I'm OTR as well :)

It has nothing to do with stupidity, you are certainly proof that retards can pass the test. I choose not to become a ham because I don't have enough foodstamps to buy ham equipment.

No, not at all Frank. But, many of whom your friend Doug calls "keywhatevers" have much more technical expertise than he can ever hope to stumble on. He can't work HF, and that is what I was eluding to. He is a moron, and that is the very denominator that keeps him where he is and pissed at those who work bands he can't legally. Sure, he can beat his meat on 6 all day long and plagiarize another's antenna design until he gets punked, which seems to have recently happened. I really thought you were much better at reading what was not written.

All of the mopedopeys effeminate ways have availed him nothing. AKC still runs the NG, Keyclowns are still off topic, mopeydopey is still a whining sissy. The more things change the more they stay the same, lol.

I really don't know what to make of the stuff I read about ND8V. I guess you Keyclown hypocrisy at it's finest. Ask Peter Analbuster about his rec.radio.cb "humour" page. He and homosexual stalker mopeydopey are birds of a feather. When they don't get their way, they start crying about what a shame it is the NG is cluttered up with their own smelly turds.

The fact remains, keyclowns DO operate illegally and get called on it by the anti boys. Illegal CB amp auctions DO get busted because they ARE against the law and against ebay policy. Keyclowns DO act effeminately and WILL be called gay, and rightly so.

AKC still runs the NG, Keyclowns are still off topic, mopeydopey is still a whining sissy. The more things change the more they stay the same.

First, you refer to Doug as my friend. Perhaps you haven't been paying much attention the past few years but I haven't exactly agreed with his methods or his madness. I have probably emailed him once.... maybe twice.... and almost never read his posts. If that's how you define friendship then maybe you need to take up a new hobby.

Second, technical expertise has nothing to do with the spectrum. There are plenty of appliance-operators on HF, and plenty of high-tech types that work nothing but UHF and up. As for me, I play on LF and VLF, had several jobs on MF through UHF, yet I'm generally lost above 1GHz. But that doesn't mean I'm technically incompetent. I don't know why Doug doesn't work HF, but I know why -I- don't work HF -- there's nothing there that interests me.

That's kind of like a person who trips over a rock, turns around and screams, "Stupid rock!" Do I need to explain further, or can you
exercising a superior intelligence?

True story.

Are you speaking of "they" or just Doug?

>That being said, there are some on this group who are pro-legal, some >who are against laws restricting freedom of communications,

Whoa there, Peter! Who in this group -- Doug included -- has ever -supported- any law that restricts the freedom of communication? Or the right to freedom of speech? Nobody, as far as I can remember. If you are suggesting that the laws governing radio communications are a violation of the right to free speech then you are WAY wrong because that has already been thrown out in both the courts -and- in this newsgroup.

Get this straight, Peter: You have freedoms, but those freedoms are limited to the extent that you don't violate the rights of others. You have freedom of movement -provided- you don't tresspass on someone else's property. You have the freedom of speech -provided- you don't cause a public nuisance. You can drive a car -provided- you stay in your own lane. Etc, etc. Your freedoms, including the freedom to communicate, are not restricted except to the extent needed to provide those same freedoms to everyone and not violate the rights of others. If there -is- such a law, US or UK, I invite you to post it.

> and others >who walk the line between - believing that the law is often an ass, and >may not always be technically correct.

And that's very true -- some laws are, for the lack of a better term, stupid. But there are ways to change laws. Legal ways. Ways that neither require nor justify violating any 'stupid' law.

>For example, distance rules. In America, you have a "No DX" rule. If >you do not reply to a signal, does that mean it did not go over that >unenforceable law.

The FCC has made it quite clear that the law applies only to the -deliberate attempt- to exceed the distance limitations. I'll agree that the laws governing the intended scope of CB radio are rarely enforced. But that does not justify the violation of those laws. Amateur radio is the proper service for the DX hobby, and is available to anyone who can afford a happy meal and can memorize a few test questions.

>Here in the UK, when CB was first legalised, our Government opted to

Was the law changed because of the de-facto standard? or because the authority was presented with valid technical arguments that supported the change? Was there an official explanation for the decision? If so, got a link?

Most politicians, like Michael Jackson, live inside a box and aren't quite in touch with reality. Sometimes it takes an extreme act to draw attention to an issue that is otherwise ignored. But the definition of 'extreme' doesn't include the word 'illegal'.

>against laws restricting freedom of communications

"freedom of communications" only pertains to verbal communications not radio or TV ect.
I can only surmise you believe you have rights in this issue the same as others believe they have the right to drive a car. You do not. Radio communications and driving a car are privileges granted by higher authorities and are subject to termination should that privilege be abused.

Hello Palpasid:

Ok its a simple radio to operate. It can not hurt the radio by playing with the knobs. But DO NOT transmit without a antenna being hooked up, that will hurt the radio.

The Volume Control, is also the on & off switch.

The Squelch Control adjusts the (receiver only) level the receiver will hear. After playing with it you will get a feeling as how it works.

You will need a antenna of some sort, to hear the local and distant stations.

What other knobs, controls, and switches is there on the radio??

Jay in the Great Mojave Desert.

You might try Classmates.com, if you know where he went to high

I don't hide behind a remailer. I use individual.net's server because road runner's news servers suck @$$ (much like you, sock puppet).

I don't have a need to hide from anyone at all including the likes of you, dill-f~ck. I'm here in Saint Petersburg, Florida. If you're interested in "finding" me, just send me an email (dr.x [at] vpndns.com) and I'll be more than happy to tell you exactly where I am, although I have a feeling you are too much of a pu$$y to come down here to make all your gay references face to face.

I joined Transamerica radio group on 27.575LSB around 1988, as TA#3457. Haven't monitored since the early 2001. I know that Jeff ran the group out in California, but there was some sort of split. Not sure where it went from there.

That shouldn't be all that shocking. If it was a "wire" it could have been for almost anything. Remember he is a "Sitting President" with all of the crazy security that goes with the job. It could have been something to do with that. You didn't see any overt signs of security while watching the debates on TV, but I'll bet you there was plenty you didn't see.

Hi Jon. Nope, he's not a ham. I'd almost suspect that life's circumstances took him far away from the CB hobby. But I'm hoping that he's looking toward the happier times of the past, and thus back to the good old CB days.

I've always believed strongly in re-establishing contact with old friends and classmates (and teachers), as I found the consequences of losing contact with some. Life is short and precious, and who knows.....you might make a difference to someone's lost life by looking them up again. If you think about it, one of the prime reasons we got into CB...is to communicate and keep in touch!

This is a great website for CB'ers! Thanks so much for all the replies.

I have an RCI 2950 that seems to be working, it will transmit and receive. I don't have any audio on this unit (no sound from the speaker). I get no sound when I hook up another speaker. The radio transmits audio and I know it will receive because I see the signal of other people talking and the signal bars moving. I am troubled about this problem because the radio works just fine, it's dead on frequency on AM, USB, LSB. I think that I checked the correct POD for the squelch to ensure that it was not turned up all the way. If anyone can help me with this problem what would be so awsome.

REQUESTS:

1. I need to get this audio (sound from speaker) working again.

2. I need the spec information for as much information about the PODS and what they are for such as VR1 VR2 and so on..... all information their is to know about it.

Thanks for any help anyone can give.

A new CD with various comedy skits that totally ridicule keyclowns!

Anti-Boys Productions will introduce this awesome CD by December, just in time for Christmas!

Proposed titles of skits:

2>Brian Griffey and Ozark333 talk about their childhood experiences.

3>Dweebo re-enacts his wedding night with twithed.

relatives.

5>Landshark's childhood: The lunch money muggings, the beatings by his older sister, his fascination with telling on other kids.

It is all in the planning stage now, but your owners the Anti-boys do have great audio recording facilities, and do seriously intend to release a record about you all this year. 1. We don't care if you forge. You care about that, not us. We don't have to be honest with you. It shows how much you are under our control that you whine about it in your feminine, mewling posts. Hi everyone;

Perhaps someone out here can answer a question. Back in the 1960's I got my first pair of walkie talkies (100mw, with transmit channel 14). Anyway, I recall that they seemed to receive all the channels at the same time (23 at the time),although equipted to only transmit on 14. That is, I could hear my friends on 14, plus seem to hear truckers on 19, and anyone else in the neighborhood no matter what channel they were on! This was not bleed-over, but actualy reception on all the channels of the CB band.

I realize that crystal control on future walkie talkies and CB's at the time solved that (before PLL), but can someone tell me what a person would need today to receive all the CB channels at once? I think it's rather a neat feature, to be able to monitor all 40 channels at the same time, like my small 100mw walkie talkies seemed to receive all 23 back then. Just a thought! Thanks!

The receivers were a rather broad tuned (front end) circuit, only the transmitter was crystal controlled. Some of the receiver circuits were even regnerative type layouts. With minimal front end selection, you pretty much hear anything for quite a spectral distance on each side of the tune peak.

This is Doug in a nutshell...no pun intended...oh well, why lie, it was intended.

Delusions
Definition

A delusion is an unshakable belief in something untrue. These irrational beliefs defy normal reasoning, and remain firm even when overwhelming proof is presented to dispute them. Delusions are often accompanied by hallucinations and/or feelings of paranoia, which act to strengthen confidence in the delusion. Delusions are distinct from culturally or religiously based beliefs that may be seen as untrue by outsiders.

Description

Delusions are a common symptom of several mood and personality-related mental illnesses, including schizoaffective disorder, schizophrenia, shared psychotic disorder, major depressive disorder, and bipolar disorder. They are also the major feature of delusional disorder. Individuals with delusional disorder suffer from long-term, complex delusions that fall into one of six categories: persecutory, grandiose, jealousy, erotomanic, somatic, or mixed. There are also delusional disorders such as dementia that clearly have organic or physical causes.

Persecutory

Individuals with persecutory delusional disorder are plagued by feelings of paranoia and an irrational yet unshakable belief that someone is plotting against them, or out to harm them.

Grandiose

Individuals with grandiose delusional disorder have an over-inflated sense of self-worth. Their delusions center on their own importance, such as believing that they have done or created something of extreme value or have a "special mission."

Jealousy

Jealous delusions are unjustified and irrational beliefs that an individual's spouse or significant other has been unfaithful.

Erotomanic

Individuals with erotomanic delusional disorder believe that another person, often a stranger, is in love with them. The object of their affection is typically of a higher social status, sometimes a celebrity. This type of delusional disorder may lead to stalking or other potentially dangerous behavior.

Somatic

Somatic delusions involve the belief that something is physically wrong with the individual. The delusion may involve a medical condition or illness or a perceived deformity. This condition differs from hypochondriasis in that the deformity is perceived as a fixed condition not a temporary illness.

Mixed

Mixed delusions are those characterized by two or more of persecutory, grandiose, jealousy, erotomanic, or somatic themes.

Causes & symptoms

Some studies have indicated that delusions may be generated by abnormalities in the limbic system, the portion of the brain on the inner edge of the cerebral cortex that is believed to regulate emotions. The exact source of delusions has not been conclusively found, but potential causes include genetics, neurological abnormalities, and changes in brain chemistry. Delusions are also a known possible side effect of drug use and abuse (e.g., amphetamines, cocaine, PCP).

Diagnosis

Patients with delusional symptoms should undergo a thorough physical examination and patient history to rule out possible organic causes (such as dementia). If a psychological cause is suspected, a mental health professional will typically conduct an interview with the patient and administer one of several clinical inventories, or tests, to evaluate mental status.

Treatment

Delusions that are symptomatic of delusional disorder should be treated by a psychologist and/or psychiatrist. Though antipsychotic drugs are often not effective, antipsychotic medication such as thioridazine (Mellaril), haloperidol (Haldol), chlorpromazine (Thorazine), clozapine (Clozaril), or risperidone (Risperdal) may be prescribed, and cognitive therapy or psychotherapy may be attempted.

If an underlying condition such as schizophrenia, depression, or drug abuse is found to be triggering the delusions, an appropriate course of medication and/or psychosocial therapy is employed to treat the primary disorder. The medication, typically, will include an antipsychotic agent.

Prognosis

Delusional disorder is typically a chronic condition, but with appropriate treatment, a remission of delusional symptoms occurs in up to 50% of patients. However, because of their strong belief in the reality of their delusions and a lack of insight into their condition, individuals with this disorder may never seek treatment, or may be resistant to exploring their condition in psychotherapy.

So Doug, IF you get proper help, there is hope you can rejoin the planet.

I would take $50.00 cash and the 04AT for it, if the HT is in good shape. Obviously we would each pay our own shipping.

You are the ONLY one here whom spends hours Googling. I don't give a shit. But please, be my guest and explain how, in your infinite wisdom, I have made Doug Adair, N8WWM the nutcase/psycho/demented/delusional nutjob that he is. This should really be interesting. I'm not a keyclown, any more than you are, but Doug is truly a nutjob, and that fact cannot be denied. If you have doubts, please reread the post above. It is a very clear and concise medical definition. It fits Mr. Adair to a "t". It does not take a rocket scientist to realize your "friend" is truly fucked up, and the keyclowns will probably disown me for this, but I suspect you have realized the same. (remember the kudos you erroneously gave me?)

Actually, the point is that you are engaging in rank speculation with

That's not a very smart thing to do is it?

I'm building this mostly for the learning experience as I have no formal electronics training. I've repaired quite a few but never built one. Since I have the pills and many of the parts I figure this would be an inexpensive learning opportunity. If it works out I will feel more confident building a more complicated design. The heat sink is off a scrapped Texas star 350. I don't like their amps, but they have a pretty stout heat sink.

Greetings Stephen! Sorry that didn't work for you. I have moved away from where I grew up and have tried to find some of my old friends, but have found few. You are right about life being too short; I am finding that out the hard way. It might be worth a try just doing a name search especially if his name was something other than the normal. That has worked for me on one occasion. Don't assume that your friends life may not have turned out well. One of my friends that I last knew was in the pen got out and is now the engineer at the local radio station keeping everything going. The other was kicked out of school for falling asleep in class due to his long nights of partying with drugs and achohol, and is now a midle school principle. Have a great week and good luck! Jon.

I've harped on this subject for quite some time to no avail. But here's a new analogy that might make sense to the senseless.....

Compare a stock radio to a 4 watt lightbulb -- your radio is basically a night-lite! Ok, so you tweak it and somehow manage to double the output power. Now you have an 8 watt nite-lite. BFD.

If you want to light up a room, get a bulb that will do the job.

There are a few ways to receive all 40 channels at once. First, you can use 40 radios. Second, you can broaden the center bandwidth to cover the entire band, noise and all. Third, you can buy a rather expensive spectrum analyzer.

If you just want to scan the channels like a regular police scanner, a few models will cover freqs down to 25 MHz. I've also heard that there has been a couple scanning CB radios but I have never seen one.

Keyclowns continue to respond on command. The battery life in those

Here's the Mod for FT 902D Yaesu if you want to use it on CB.

SIMPLE MOD

You change all crystals in the 10 meter position to 1mhz LOWER

That gives 26 to 28 mhz operation and that is all you need to do 98% of

Here's the mod for more channels on this unit.

The PLL is not modifiable when used in an AM only radio, the only method that will allow more channels is to disconnect the 15.360 Mhz signal that is coming from a tripler circuit and replace it with another one depending on the required freq. range.

Here are the instructions:

Lift one end of C87 (the side closest to IC2), then connect a switch's common pin to the open pcb hole, connect the "modified" switch position to a crystal oscillator, then connect the "normal" switch position to C87, all you need to do is get a crystal to use for the oscillator, the original frequency is 15.360, you add / subtract the number of channels to / from the frequency

Say you want 26.515 - 26.955 (the low band) just deduct .450 from the original freq (450 khz = 1 band of channels), so a crystal of 14.910 Mhz will give you the low band.

OR to get 27.415 - 27.855 (high band) you will need a 15.810 Mhz crystal.

You may actually use both but the radio may not cover the freq. range (due to limitations in the tuning circuits for the broadband requirements)

The only hard part is finding a supplier for the crystal, the mod itself is easy !

Locate RV2 pot and turn to substantially increase both modulation and TX power swing.

Find coil RFC5, spread moderately to gain some TX power.

Locate L201, a sealed coil and core. Since the core cannot be adjusted, force two (2) loops of the coil over the core to increase TX power.

Find L202, compress this coil as much as possible to gain TX power.

Locate L203, spread coil dramatically and bend into a semi-circular arc to increase its length. This will increase TX power.

RESULTS:

Stock Radio TX was 4.5 watts swinging to 6 watts. After mods, TX was up to 7.5 watts swinging to 15+ watts with a stock microphone. No bird meter, so the output power stated here is somewhat exaggerated.

This radio has NEVER been opened up. It is just like it was when purchased in 1978 for 399.00.

This is the one thats like the TRC458 but with a digital clock built in. It has the same guts as a Cobra 138 XLR, 139XLR, and the EARLY President Washington.
The rig can be modded to 200 channels or more, and I have the Secret CB modification instructions. The PLL is the Uniden 858. It comes with a Radio shack Power desk mike, too. Both are in excellent condition.

I will take 170.00 and that includes shipping. Email me not the newsgroup.

Thanks, Frank. Using 40 radios at the same time might be nice! Haha.

Now that I think about it, with all the chatter and skip out there, it might be worse than in the 1960's, and I might end up wishing for a more selective reception (one channel, or maybe none!). Thanks!

Hey, has anyone who was into CB or walkie talkies back in the mid 1960's ever heard of rumors that an FCC operative who went by a code name of "The Colonel" was in the midwest, looking for people who operated on the illegal basement channels (to be specific, 20 below channel 1)?

I think that all of us had fears (even paranoia) about the FCC back then, and we made sure we had our licenses, and obeyed the rules while on the CB. Nevertheless, I was fascinated by chatter back then over this so called "Colonel", and wonder if anyone out here heard the same rumors (or knows anything factual)? Thanks

It is a lousy day for America when issues relating to sexual orientation are forced upon children. The gay community has a right to be gay, The Scouts have a right to be whatever they want too.

I think the original guy who forced this issue ought to be ashamed of himself for making this issue even come up on the radar scope of an organization that deals with minors.

I am not anti-gay. I am very pro letting kids be kids. To me the situation shows that whether gay or straight, this guy cares about himself before children.

Don't know about the Colonel, but here it was "Uncle Charley" and they DID nab a few people for running power. Not once but a few times.
They fined the operators and confiscated all equipment.

Yep, -Charley- was the handle we used for them in Ohio too, back in the CB boom era. IIRC we were always looking for vans that looked like pin cushions. lol

I can recall searching for someone to talk to on CB in the late 60's to early 70's. Had my tube'r Lafayette and a droopy drawers on the chimney, that my dad was nice enough to install for me.

Those were simpler times, but a little Mayberry never hurt anyone. :)

Mrs Kerry is "hot"????? Laura Bush is a friggin' pin-up compared to Theresa. Daughter Alex is nice, Vannessa is just "ok". Bush twins are pretty average as well.

Damn Frank, I'll google up a hooker for ya if she'll take paypal :-)

That's easy, he's a dogie and his cohort is a monkey. Petco is the trainer for retarded castaway pets. I've seen pictures of him in a new suit and a rubberized suite. Trouble is -we- pay for his dementia meds while he giggles and drools in a public funded stupor.

I seem to jinx ALL Missouri sports teams. At the beginning of football season I razzed a Denver fan about how the Chiefs would be superbowl bound and the Broncos would dwell the cellar. If we go to Vegas, you have to pay for my trip home as I will no doubt be broke.

Greetings! I have a Teaberry T- Command that is a real pain trying to find a mic to suit it. It loves to squeal with any sort of power mic. I have a problem getting enough modulation out of an unpowered mic. I have thought about using a regular hand mic or desk mic made for Teaberry. Any thoughts out there or suggestions on what mic might work well? I have tried a regular old chicken choker D-104 with mediocre results. Have a great week! Jon.

True enough but he has as much chance as you or I getting elected. Funny sorta that it sticks in my mind about Ralph fighting for the Corvair owners. My Dad had one that was loads of fun, in fact he used to put that Corvair up on the railroad tracks and half deflate the tires.. That car would hum down those tracks and my old man would be laughing his ass off yelling "look no hands"!

Me and my dad have done some crazy shit over the years, but I never figured Ralph Nader would be a common bond for him and I. That kind of change probably won't happen in our lifetime, Frank. :)

I don't vote for someone based on their chances to win. What good is that? What message are you sending? That you are content with the lesser of two evils? You should vote for whoever you think will do the best job.

Because people keep voting for who they think will be the 'winner', the next president will either be tweedle-dum or tweedle-dee (thank you, Helen Keller, for your wonderful insight), and partisan politics will always take precedence over common sense and public interests.
The two parties like it that way. Both were scared shitless when Perot made a strong showing in his first run. But instead of choosing better candidates to compete against third parties, they shut-out the other parties as much as possible.

I vote for independence -- independence from the two-party cartel. We will never be given better choices until we begin to -make- better choices. IMHO.

Here in the High Mojave Desert it cleared up in time to see it until it was fully covered, then some clouds covered it for just long enough that when they broke, the lighted side was starting to come out again. Next one will be in 07.

You bet it will! Wouldn't it be great to see more podiums during the presidential debates?

I hate to see people voting just for the sake of voting. As we've learned with GWB, we need to make our decisions very carefully. Not everyone does. Maybe voting should be left to those that are willing to take responsibility for their decisions......

Maybe in a vacuum, but in reality less than half of our eligible population actually exercise their right. They do restrict felons and such from voting, but I doubt they'd make a difference.

Everyone should vote or stfu if you didn't.

Greetings! No the radio has no talk back mods done to it. It has had FM added along with some upper and lower channels. I have tried all the adjustments I can think of to keep the powered mics from making it squeal, but with little success. I love the radio. It has a unique look about it... not a sissy radio look. I am disappointed with the receive as well and have adjusted it to get the best receive, but it does not compare with the receive or modulation of most radios. I have been thinking that I may just take it to a good tech and see what he can do. Before I do that I want to try to find a good mic to fit it. I would really like to get a Teaberry mic to make it a completer Teaberry unit. Any thoughts or suggestions would be appreciated. Thanks! Jon.

You may have a blown audio amp chip, or possibly an open coupling cap.
Check for cold solder joints as well,as 2950's are prone for having cold solder joints.

There were always rumors of the "FCC" being in town. Most of them were just hot air. I wrote a story that pretty much identifies the type of FCC paranoia that we all had back then:

I disagree. There are way too many people in this country, who can't even name their congresspeople, or even the name of the vice president. People who have no idea how government works, or that have little to no depth of knowledge of the issues at hand, should refrain from voting. It's way too much responsibility for someone who is clueless.

I don't want another president (or vice president) who is elected because they have "nice hair"......

The variable power control on the front panel does not reduce the output power,
I presume (rightly or wrongly) that there is a pot for the lower power settings that needs adjusting to allow the front panel control to function correctly.

The variable power control on the front panel -is- the power adjustment pot. If it doesn't work then something else is wrong; i.e, disconnected, bypassed or broke. There is no other pot -- you presumed wrongly. In the future it would help to ask the right question instead of "jumping to conclusions".

Upon further investigation the power varies on am but not fm mode ? so this surely rules out the variable itself, this pot ultimately connects to the pcb via a small preset variable resistor, which can vary the power according to the mode selected,
I suggest you only make comments on subjects that you know something about and not stick your nose in everybody elses business !

Kind Regards

Google for a memory jog. I remember comments being made by nocodes that cb should be done away with. Such a law would restrict that freedom.

Tell it to Howard Stern or Bubba the Love Sponge. Their recent RECORD fines from the FCC are testament to the law restricting exactly what speech may be broadcast and how screwed up the law actually is. A few examples,,,, one radio station may use an offensive term, but another radio station may not say the same thing,,,,,this dj can say this, but that dj over there can't say it. It's ok to say this on late night radio, but if you say it in the morning, we're going to fine you,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,it's screwed up so bad and Stern took Powell to task for it the other day. Now daddy Powell is pissed at Stern.

Freedom of speech will always be tested in the courts, thank God. What you consider violating the rights of others, others may disagree. For example, what may offend you may not offend another, especially where speech and/or obscenity law is defined.

No, the word "nuisance" is to be found nowhere in either of the recent record fines against Stern and BTLS (btls.com).

You are confusing the message with the messenger -- CB radio is not a freedom. If CB radio is ever nixed (and I hope it isn't), you would still be free to communicate, just not via CB radio.

Again, there's the difference between the message and messenger. There is a similar confusion whenever a radio station decides not to play a particular song for whatever reason. When that happens there is always a crowd that whines about censorship. But if their cries had any validity, every station would be forced to play every song from every artist since the beginning of time just so some Perry Como fan doesn't throw a fit.

And that's why the rights of citizens are defined in the Constitution. Yes, even the Constitution is subject to interpretation, but that's the job of the judicial system. So far that system has done a pretty good job. Not perfect, but pretty good.

It was just an example, and it wasn't even intended to be specific to radio. Radio is not the only venue for speech, as Howie has recently learned.

It's not a matter of degrees. The right to free speech does not equate to the right to life, or the right to vote, to freedom of religion, to peaceably assemble, to keep and bear arms, etc. And most importantly, the right to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

P.S. Not for the squeamish!

I hear people say that they don't want to watch things like this, and it pisses me off. Of course, these are the same morons running around with the magnetic ribbons on their cars. Do they even know what they support? (yeah, I know they think they support the troops) I used to be a Bush supporter, but now I am not and I live in Texas. I apologize to the rest of the country for having helped given this oil-baby one more stepping stone to the white house by voting for him for governor. His Dad was a good man, he is just an idiot who refuses to admit he messed up and do the right thing. I sincerely hope you do not have loved ones who die defending his oil cronies.

Petco is where keyclowns buy their hamsters...it is convenient, right next door to Home Depot, where they buy their duct tape.

Petro is the place where keyclowns go with their knee pads to make

You asked for alignment info, not repair info. Apparently your radio has a faulty component. It may also need alignment, but an alignment will not repair the faulty component.

>jump to all the conclusions you want to now, your getting boring

And you are avoiding the question: Why do you want to reduce the power?

>What do you think of junior? His policies in Iraq, etc?

You just had to ask, didn't you? Oh well.....

In college, little Bush partied hardy without direction or plans for the future. He couldn't even make up his mind between Harvard or Yale (but we all have that problem, right?). He successfully dodged the draft, but then he couldn't even fulfill the simple responsibilities required while in the National Guard. He failed in the oil business, he failed in politics, and he even failed as someone else's campaign manager (and usually hit the bottle after each failure). His recent success is the result of two things: 1) Sucking up to the Christian conservatives, which he learned by studying the demographics during his daddy's campaign; and 2) Running dirty campaigns, mostly through the use of political groups that claimed to be independent of the official campaign so as to maintain plausible deniability (a trick he learned from his daddy). While so-called 'independent' campaign groups have been around for quite some time, Bush has mastered the technique.

I have tried to put a positive spin on Iraq from the beginning, but hindsight is always clearer than predictions of the future. The fact is that Iraq is a mess. MacGregor's plan might have worked if there had been the backing of the UN, and if the resources had been in place to effect a very fast transistion of government. But Bush wanted the oil (probably to redeem himself for his failures in the oil industry) and Cheney wanted a big Halliburton contract, so it was inevitable that there would be heavy damage to the infrastructure and a long-term occupation. The result is that Bush's policies have actually created more enemies than they eliminated.

The only way out (if Bush gets re-elected) is to suck up to the UN and beg for forgiveness. If he doesn't (and he won't because that would mean giving up the oil and the Halliburton contracts), the draft will be -unavoidable- because we can't abandon Iraq in the present state of chaos, and we can't get it under control with the troops that are available. I remember watching the debate when Bush said there will be no draft, and the very first thing that popped into my mind was daddy Bush's infamous line, "Read my lips..."!

What scares me is that the President, after a declaration of national emergency from FEMA (the organization drafted and created by Oliver North, et.al.), has the authority to suspend the election. And I think Bush might just have the balls to pull a stunt like that. Maybe the CIA (formerly headed by -- guess who -- yep, daddy Bush!) will cough up some "intelligence" that says terrorists with WMDs are in the US and ready to strike.....

I really hope I'm wrong, but buckle up anyway because the road just might get a little bumpy!

Bush was honorably discharged from the guard, which means he did indeed fulfill his duties. That is a matter of public record. Reports to the contrary have already be exposed as fabrications, much to the dismay of one Dan Rather.....

You mean those 527 groups like moveon.org, and help from such people as Michael Moore and the mainstream media, who show only the bad things that happen in Iraq, and spin the truth to support their agenda? Oh, that's right, they're on the left wing.....As far as dirty politics is concerned, no one runs a dirtier campaign than the democrats. All the way back to the days of buying votes with cartons of cigarettes. Republicans are only responding in kind.

You mean the same UN who is now hip deep in the oil for food scandal? And some people wonder why the French, the Germans, and the Russians were so "reluctant" to join us in ousting Saddam......

And you are more than welcome to name any company who could handle the oil services requirements in the timetable that was required and with the same competence as Halliburton. The plain truth is that there weren't any. A "no-bid" contract is warranted in this case. It's way too easy to perpetuate conspiracy theories with regard to Cheney's old company. But not all dark closets contain skeletons.

>If he doesn't (and he won't because that would >mean giving up the oil and the Halliburton contracts),

If this is all about oil, then why haven't we seen gallon one of it? Why have we so steadily maintained that Iraq control its own future? How can we pull of this grand deception of "looting" Iraqi oil, while setting them up to be a self governed democracy?

If Kerry wins, the same scenario is just as likely. Considering that the French and the Germans have already publicly stated that they'll not send troops to Iraq even if Kerry wins, pretty much lets the air out of Kerry's empty promise to build "real" coalitions. I suspect that the only way Kerry would be able to build any allies from the former holdout countries would be made at a great disadvantage to American interests. I don't think I could respect or even stomach a leader who would brown nose the French and the rest of the European ingrates.

Paranoia is not becoming of you Frank.

I'm disappointed in you Frank. You're a smart guy, so I can't understand why you are buying into this paranoid viewpoint. This is the talk I would expect from undereducated Michael Moore types, who feed on this nonsensical propaganda like a sponge. None of it can be substantiated with anything other than speculative conjecture.

Before you vote for Kerry, you should read the book "Unfit for command", and check out these sites:

http://www.kerryoniraq.com

http://www.stolenhonor.com

http://www.wintersoldier.com

Be sure to check out the audio and video clips and the FBI files.

You might not like the way Bush has handled things. But Kerry is far from better, and in fact, is much, much worse. He lacks moral clarity, he's indecisive, and changes his position to suit the political winds. He gave aid and comfort to our enemy during Vietnam, while he was still a commissioned officer. His actions are directly responsible for extending the incarceration of many POW's, who were tortured because Kerry branded them as "war criminals", which then exempts them from the protection offered by the Geneva convention. What he did to this country is just as deplorable as what Jane Fonda did, but at least she isn't running for the top job in our government. His picture even hangs as a memorial in a museum in Hanoi.

Kerry admits that he took part in the commission of atrocities in Vietnam http://www.wintersoldier.com/audio/kerry2.mp3, which begs the obvious question; why isn't he in jail? If he told the truth about those war crimes, then he is a guilty co-conspirator, and should be court martialed accordingly. Since he wasn't, it can only be concluded that there must not have been enough evidence to support his claims. In other words, HE LIED. There is also the question of why his honorable discharge was not received until recently instead of when he left the service.

Bush might not be the brightest bulb in the pack, but Kerry is nothing short of a traitor. A man who sold out his own brothers in arms for political gain.

You can catch the -real-Pot Belly Radio Police and the Redneck Roundup any week night on ham radio 3.860 LSB at 8:00 PM Eastern Time.
They call themselves the Eastern Patriot Net. A friend of mine e-mailed me and said to have a listen. Sho enuf there they were! All paranoid and goofy as the crazy old John Bircher Lady who sees commies under her bed or your 85 yo Auntie who uncle John keeps in the granny cottage attached to the house under medication. Last evening's topic was alleged 1000 Russian troops somewhere in North Carolina on an military airbase. (...no doubt the resident male NC redneck militia is worried about this because those cute young 19-23 yo Russians don't have beer-bellies and chain smoke like their current 'merkin boyfriends do and will likely end up marrying their girlfriends in the long run when they move here, get a college degree and leave them with 10 times more income than any militialoon trash bozo ever will be able to do!) The other topic-of-the-evening was a rambling 15 minute long rant by their resident cukoo-bird from Michigan who went on to say how Kerry and Bush report to the Queen of England and the Rothschilds (..or was it the Pope? I forget which) turning the USA into some kind of a Plantation with the Jews running things. (sounded as 3

While I don't like Bush or his advisors, Kerry's no better than him. He is going to raise your Taxes, he hasn't produced any sort of specifics on his "economic" plan. He keeps whining about the working man, Hell he's got more money than GW & his entire family combined
Either way, both them aren't worth the cost of a bullet.

No, I meant THE COLONEL, as being seperate from Uncle Charlie. From what I heard back in those days, THE COLONEL operated some activity on those basement channels, and when people started going there, it caused some friction. Thus, the fears and rumors about the COLONEL, who for some reason was bent on getting anyone who operated on -20 (20 below 1). Midwest. Under the supervision of one of my older CB friends, who got me started in CB, we got clever and found that by switching the transmit and receive crystals in our walkie talkies, we got a quiet and more private channel. Only problem was, according to his freq counter, we were 20 below 1.

Again, nothing for certain, but it was all the talk of our area back then...and YES, I did hear activity on that frequency.

Read "Smoke and Mirrors" by Dan Baum for an incredibly chilling account of the failed drug war and the manner in which the Reagan-Bush administration and all their players conspired, colluded, and had a direct hand in what they were allegedly trying to stop. I know I'm

You too, ay? Hehe,,exactly. When he said "There will be no draft", I immediately thought of a passage (can't remember where,,,perhaps you can) that allows the president to reactivate any ex-service member for up to ten years after their discharge. I agree wholeheartedly that current troop numbers can not sustain effective long term occupation.

Tell it to Howard Stern or Bubba the Love Sponge. Their recent RECORD speech may be broadcast and how screwed up the law actually is. A few examples,,,, one radio station may use an offensive term, but another radio station may not say the same thing,,,,,this dj can say this, but that dj over there can't say it. It's ok to say this on late night radio, but if you say it in the morning, we're going to fine you,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,it's screwed up so bad and Stern took Powell to task for it the other day. Now daddy Powell is pissed at Stern.

Freedom of speech will always be tested in the courts, thank God. What you consider violating the rights of others, others may disagree. For example, what may offend you may not offend another, especially where speech and/or obscenity law is defined.

Yes, I agree, but one of the "bads" we must take in order to have the "goods" is the current incarnation of the FCC.

No, the word "nuisance" is to be found nowhere in either of the recent record fines against Stern and BTLS (btls.com).

It's a matter of government legislating morality. They knew they were fighting a losing battle when they allowed "We may not be able to define obscenity, but we know it when we see it." The US is behind the times when compared to the rest of the world and what is deemed acceptable broadcast. The Janet Jackson thing and its fallout was a social step backwards.

Read "Smoke and Mirrors" by Dan Baum for an incredibly chilling account of the failed drug war and the manner in which the Reagan-Bush administration and all their players conspired, colluded, and had a direct hand in what they were allegedly trying to stop. I know I'm preaching to the choir here, Frank, but the madness from this party continues to intentionally confuse and abuse. I guess what I don't get is watching the dubya crowd (sans the top two income percenters and bandwagon flag wavers) get screwed repeatedly without so much as a kiss, yet smile and say "Thank you sir, may I have another?"..!!!! We indeed deserve the government we elect.

Invoking Kerry as a means of defending Bush only works on Kerry supporters. I may be anti-Bush, but I'm no pro-Kerry. He simply is a tool in which to remove GW BUllSHit, nothing more, nothing less. In fact, if Bush loses this election, it will be in part because of his alienating half the constituents by casting all who oppose him as pro-Kerry, pro-terrorist, pro-abortion, pro-liberal, pro-this, pro-that.
Nuthin' but lipservice from a failed administration (intel, search for BL, predictions about wmds, oil prices, economy, just to name a few) who is asking for four more years of the same BUllSHit. Rumsfled is in hiding for damage control and the "war" is no closer to being over than it was when Bush declared victory and major combat "over". It is the Bush arrogance coupled with ignorance that permits him to delude himself to the point that he believes he can somehow end the arab conflict that has been in effect since Isaac and Ishmael had conflict. Vote for Bush,,,,,you'll pay 3.00 a gallon at the pump before its all over. Remember when diesel was the bargain? Diesel was cheaper and cars and trucks got better gas mileage with diesel and the proliferation of diesel engines took place. To cancel that savings, diesel, over time, slowly overtook reg unleaded and super. Have to make up that deficit the oil companies and their investors are losing by the mass production and consumption of diesel engines.

When you reverse channel 10 walkie talkie crystals, you end up transmitting on 26.620 Mhz, which used to be very active with the civil air patrol.

Back in the CB Heyday... small monitor boxes were made that covered the cb band. Pretty much doing what you're asking us about. I have seen them made in a few different brand names, they simply had a speaker, volume knob and an antenna jack. Most were 9 volt battery operation.

No one is making them anymore, but you might put the search word out or look on Ebay.

RESTRUCTURING: ARRL EC MEETS TO DISCUSS BANDWIDTH AND BPL

A draft of a petition to the FCC dealing with bandwidth regulation and the latest on the B-P-L front dominated a recent meeting of the ARRL Executive Committee held October 16 in Dallas, Texas. Amateur Radio Newsline's Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, takes an in-depth look at what was discussed:

At the Texas gathering, ARRL Executive Committee -- better known as the E C -- devoted much of its fall session to a discussion of comments received on the League's draft FCC petition seeking regulation of subbands by bandwidth rather than by emission mode. The E C also authorized the filing of a Petition for Reconsideration in response to the Broadband over Powerline Report and Order in ET Docket 04-37, which the FCC adopted October 14. But the E C acknowledges that the drafting and filing the petition must await release of the actual Report and Order, which should happen in a few weeks. It did however authorize ARRL General Counsel Chris Imlay, W3KD, to prepare to pursue other available remedies regarding procedural and substantive defects in the B-P-L proceeding.

Responding to a synopsis of the bandwidth petition and proposed rule changes posted on the ARRL Web site, several hundred League members and others in the ham radio community offered comments and suggestions. The good news says ARRL Chief Executive Officer David Sumner, K1ZZ, is that the Executive Committee found considerable support for the concept of the petition. It also was happy to see some constructive suggestions to reduce both the impact of the changes on current amateur operations, as well as possible unintended consequences.

By way of background, earlier this year, the Executive Committee decided to make a synopsis and explanation of the petition available before filing it with the FCC. At the Dallas meeting, the E C agreed to submit several recommended amendments to the proposed rules changes to the ARRL Board of Directors for its consideration when they meet in January. These include such items as retention of rules permitting automatically controlled digital stations including packet and other digital modes in narrow H F subbands. The draft petition had proposed dropping these provisions.

Also in the digital domain the E C addressed a rule prohibiting so-called semi-automatic digital operation on frequencies below 28 MHz where phone is permitted. This addressed a concern that ''robot'' digital stations might take over the phone bands. And a segment for 3 kHz bandwidth with no phone emissions at 10.135 to 10.150 MHz to accommodate existing and planned digital operations was included.

Another item adopted was the deletion of the word "continuous" from the description of test transmissions authorized on most frequencies above 51 MHz. Lastly is simplification of proposed changes to Part 97.309 of the Commission rules. This, to clarify that FCC-licensed amateur stations may use any published digital code as long as other rules are observed.

The Leagues Dave Sumner emphasized that the recommendations address major issues raised to date but are not necessarily the last word on the draft petition.

The ARRL's bandwidth proposals take into account the League's prior ''Novice refarming'' petition to expand some High Frequency phone bands--included in the ''omnibus'' FCC Notice of Proposed Rule Making in WT Docket 04-140. (ARRL)

RESTRUCTURING: UK HAMS GET EXPANDED 40 METER PRIVILEGES

Hams in the U-K have been granted expanded privileges on the 40 meter band. Jeremy Boot, G4NJH, is in Nottingham, England, with more:

Ofcom and the Radio Society of Great Britain are pleased to announce that all necessary procedures required for early access to the 7.1 to 7.2MHz spectrum for all UK radio amateurs have been finalized and that access is allowed from 01.00 UTC on Sunday 31st October 2004. Early access is granted on a Secondary (non-interference) basis using a maximum of 26dBW (400 watts) PEP.

Notices of Variation for the U.K. Foundation, Intermediate and Full licenses have been published on the Ofcom website at http://tinyurl.com/4tuud. It is recommended that for the time being only voice and Morse code modes are used between 7.1 and 7.2MHz. Band planning issues on MHz will be kept under regular review and will be dependent on the number of administrations granting early access to this band prior to full Primary access on 29th March 2009.

Jeremy Boot, G4NJH.

Thanks Jeremy. (GB2RS)

RESTRUCTURING: AUSTRALIA LOOKS AR VOIP RULES

The Australian Communications Authority -- the A-C-A -- says that it is reviewing telecommunications regulations to cover fast-emerging voice over Internet protocol services. In a discussion paper released about a week and a half ago, the A-C-A says that it aims to identify any regulatory challenges resulting from the increased availability of VoIP services and recommend to the government how those challenges might be met. What affect any changes might have to ham radio VoIP interconnects in Australia is to early to assess at this time. (WIA News)

THE FUTURE: SCIENTISTS PREDICT EARLY SOLAR MINIMUM

And some possible god news for hams tired of the rather poor High Frequency band conditions these days. It comes from the GB2RS News Service which says that American physicist David Hathaway believes that the next solar minimum could arrive sooner than previously predicted.

GB2RS News quotes on an article on the 'Science at NASA' website. It predicts that the next solar minimum could occur in late 2006. That's about a year earlier than previously thought

Dr. Hathaway bases his prediction on data from the last eight solar cycles, which show that solar minimum follows the first sunspot-free day on the sun by 34 months. In this solar cycle, the first spotless day was on 28th January this year and more recently, on 11th and 12th October, there were two more spotless days.

Hathaway goes on to state that the next solar maximum might also come early. He is quoted as saying that solar activity intensifies rapidly after solar minimum. That in recent cycles, the Solar Max has followed Solar Minimum by just four years. If that is the case, the next solar maximum could be not all that far away in 2010 and a Solar Max is good news for D-Xing. (GB2RS)

ENFORCEMENT: CB AMP SALE BRINGS $7000 FINE

A North Jackson, Ohio equipment retailer has been dinged with a heavy fine. This for allegedly selling those illegal 11 meter amplifiers that the C-B crowd calls footwarmers.

The noted violations involve Paladen Communications sale of external Citizens Band radio frequency power amplifiers. In it's October 21st Forfeiture Order the FCC alleges that Paladen, which does business as the CB Shop, did willfully and repeatedly violate Section 302(b) of the Communications Act of 1934 and Sections 2.815(b) and 2.815(c) of the Commission's Rules by making these units available to the general public.

Paladen was issued the $7,000 fine back on May 27th. The FCC says the company never responded to the notice. Its now been given 30 days to pay or face collection proceedings. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: CB OPERATOR FINED $10,000 FOR UNLICENSED OPERATION

And using an illegal C-B amplifier will cost a Washington state operator some really big bucks. This as the FCC fines Robert A. Spiry of Tacoma 10,000 for what the FCC say was operating a radio station without Commission authorization. Amateur Radio Newsline's Norm Seeley, KI7UP, has the details:

In its letter to Robert A. Spiry, the FCC claims that it found the amplifier as part of a follow-up investigation. This, after receiving numerous complaints from Spiry's neighbors.

On March 13th, April 2nd, October 29th and November 5th of 2002, agents from the Commission's Seattle, Washington Field Office concluded that the interference resulted from 11 meter transmissions originating from Spiry's residence and from his mobile station in his vehicle. During station inspections conducted on April 2nd and November 5th, 2002, the Seattle Office agents determined that Spiry was operating transmitters that were not FCC certified and that he was operating with a linear amplifier attached to his CB radio transmitter.

Spiry was advised that his use of unauthorized and non-certified equipment voided his blanket authority to operate his CB station. Nevertheless, the FCC says that he continued to operate the unauthorized equipment at the expense of his blanket authorization to operate his CB radio station.

On December 30th, 2002, the Seattle Office issued a Notice of Apparent Liability for Monetary Forfeiture in the amount of $10,000 to Spiry. In other words, a $10,000 fine.

In his January 15, 2003 response Spiry did not dispute the facts that lead to the fine. Instead he stated that he had ceased CB radio transmissions and had obtained an amateur radio license. The FCC database lists him as holding a Technician class license with the call sign KD7TRB. He also claimed to have removed his CB radio antenna and asserted that he was unaware that the amount of the forfeiture could be so high. He told the FCC that he was unable to pay that amount.

But in affirming the fine the FCC refers Spiry to Section 301 of the Communications Act. It says that no person shall use or operate any apparatus for the transmission of energy or communications or signals by radio within the United States without a proper license. The FCC says that Spiry's 2002 operation of his CB radio station with transmitters that were not FCC certified and use of a linear amplifier constitutes repeated violations. It also notes that his taking down the C-B antenna and getting a ham radio ticket are not sufficient actions to negate the punishment for the original offenses.

The FCC says that Robert Spiry has not provided it with adequate financial information from which to determine his ability to pay the forfeiture. Based on this lack of information cancellation or reduction of the $10,000 fine is not warranted and that it stands as is.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, Norm Seeley, KI7UP, Scottsdale, Arizona.

Spiry was given the usual 30 days to pay. If he fails to do so the FCC says that the matter may be turned over to the Department of Justice for further action. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: BROADCASTER FINED

The FCC has also issued an $8000 monetary forfeiture to Crown Communication, Inc. Cowner is the owner of an antenna structure in Hobbs, New Mexico. The FCC says that the fine is for willful and repeated violation of Section 17.50 of the Commission's Rules involving Crown's failure to maintain good visibility of the tower. The situation dates back to August 13, 2002, when an agent from the Denver Office inspected antenna structure and observed that unpainted cables attached to it precluded good visibility . (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: NO LICENSE - STAY OFF THE AIR

The FCC has warned an unlicensed operator to stay off the air or face some heavy consequences. This, in a September 30th letter to Travis Lee Dameron of Stuarts Draft, Virginia.

In its warning to Dameron the FCC says that it has information indicating that he has been operating radio equipment without a license on the Two Meter Amateur Radio Band. It tells him that transmitting without a license is a violation of Section 301 of the Communications Act and will subject him to fine or imprisonment, as well as seizure of any non-certified radio transmitting equipment he may have in his possession.

Dameron was also requested to call the FCC's Riley Hollingsworth to discuss the matter. If Dameron fails to stay off the air, the fine he could face would range from $7,500 to $10,000. (FCC)

RADIO RULES: FRAUDULENT STATION APPLICATIONS FILED WITH FCC

Bob Gonsett's CGC Communicator reports that a number of fraudulent Form 301 applications have been filed with the FCC this month. CGC says that the agency has even accepted for filing a number of these fake applications, and has assigned them file numbers.

One application in question was for a conventional, non-grandfathered Class B FM station. The petitioner was asking for a transmitter power level of 105 kilowatts E-R-P. This, in a Class B zone where only 50 kilowatts is allowed without a waiver request. And says CGC, there was no waiver request.

CGC adds that it appears as if the Commission is not screening these incoming Form 301 applications. This, even when there are blatant defects in some. (CGC) station's Educational Resources Center, which has become America's most prolific teacher trainer in multi-media techniques, and developed its first cable channel known as MetroArts Thirteen.

Ham radio wise, W1BKR was a co-producer of the ARRL video Amateur Radio Today and his article titled Amateur Radio is Part of New Media Task Force appeared in the May issue of QST. The induction ceremony honoring W1BKR will take place on Monday, November 8th at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York City. (Adapted from Shoptalk)

NAMES IN THE NEWS: N4MC "VANITY HQ" WEBSITE GOING AWAY

Also, Michael Carroll, N4MC, has announced that as of Thursday, October 21st he is no longer supporting the Vanity H Q website. Vanity H Q was, and for the moment still is, a point in cyberspace where you can go to research availability of United States vanity call availability or simply find out the latest issued.

According to a posting at the site, at some point in the near future the www.vanityhq.com domain will itself become inactive. N4MC says that this is not an action based upon lack of funding. Rather, its because of a shift in his personal priorities. (K2GW)

ON THE NET: JUNO FOLLOW-UP

An update now to our recent story on Internet provider Juno cutting out most of its free services using off-line mail handling software. And it comes thanks to some really intensive digging by one of our listeners who happens to be a Juno subscriber.

After hearing our story, John Vander Stel, WH6LY, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, took it upon himself to find out more. He says that contrary to our original story free account users will not have to go through another ISP to access their Juno E-mail after December 1st. He says that this was only made clear to him by digging into the F-A-Q about this change and then calling back to talk to another Juno phone rep. He says that the even the first one he spoke with was not well versed in this change and provided improper information.

But all of John's work paid off for those of you who use Juno. The good news is that Juno access software will still allow the free account user to access the Internet and go to the Juno Webmail site to access their E-mail on-line. However, the time using that connection will be counted against their 10 free hours of connect time.

We have often said that you are all an important part of the Amateur Radio Newsline team. Our sincere thanks to John Vander Stel, WH6LY, who proves this once again. (WH6LY)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: WORLDS LARGEST NANOTUBES

The University of California at Irvine announced what it calls a breakthrough engineering discovery that is expected to have supercomputer and health care applications. This, as researchers at the Henry Samueli School of Engineering said they have synthesized the world's longest electrically conducting nanotubes. Nanotubes that are ten times longer than those previously created.

For those not aware, a nanotube is a memory unit made from carbon and consists of a graphite sheet seamlessly wrapped into a cylinder only a few nanometers wide. A nanometer is one billionth of a meter or about the size of 10 atoms strung together. The scientists who made them say that this discovery may lead to the development of extremely strong, lightweight materials and ultra dense nano-memory arrays for extremely powerful computers, ultra low-loss power transmission lines, and nano-biosensors for use in health care applications. WORLDBEAT: HAM RADIO SAILING THE ANTARCTIC

Call this one ham radio across the Antarctic. It started back on September 14th, when the famed yacht "Apostol Andrey" started out to circumnavigate the area while carrying an operational ham radio station.

During the trip the yacht will travel around the shores of the Antarctica without going further to the North beyond the 60th parallel which is the border of the Antarctic region in accordance with the International Agreement. The crew will try to establish a record for penetrating sailing yachts crossing the 70th parallel of the south latitude.

And for ham radio here's the best part. The skipper of the "Apostol Andrey" is Nikolay Andrey, R3AL. He plans to be on the air from the Antarctic area starting this December and continuing through March of 2005. Andrey has the QSL cards already printed for this expedition and the ship also has an official Russian postmark onboard and a special postal stationary envelope for this expedition.

For details on the World-Wide Antarctic Program and the expedition, go to the World-Wide-Web. The spot is in cyberspace at www.ddxc.net/wap (Via E-mail)

Lastly, G4JAG, is now active from Thailand as HS0ZFP. Chris can be found on 20 meters most evenings and says the best time for contacts back home to the U-K is around 18.00 UTC. For all of these stations, QSL as directed on the air. (RSGB)

THAT FINAL ITEM: HAM RADIO HISTORY - A ZL MILESTONE QSO

And finally this week, a bit of history from right here, down-under. Its the story of the first ever two-way radio communication between New Zealand and England made on the 18th of October 1924 by Frank Bell of Shag Valley Station, Otago.

Back then, Frank held the callsign Z4AA and on that date, using some rather primitive home-brew ham radio equipment, he made contact with Cecil Goyder, G2SZ at the Mill Hill school in London. The CW QSO lasted for about 1 hour and dealt mainly with issues of signal quality. It was also the start of the first scheduled contact -- or sked -- between hams in the two nations. For several nights after the historic contact the two radio amateurs kept in touch.

Further details of the activities leading to the historic QSO can be found on pages 40-41 of the NZART publication Ham Shacks, Brass Pounders & Rag chewers, A History of amateur Radio in New Zealand. Detailed information on the actual QSO, complete with a transcript, can be found on the web pages of the Otago, Branch 30 of NZART. To read them, just point your browser to www.qsl.net/zl4aa/ and follow the index for more. (NZART News)

Those walkie talkies were never intentionally made to receive all 23 channels. The quality/selectivity was poor enough that you could still hear stations other than the desired channel 14.

Slightly OT, here's an interesting tidbit I read last night: It was JFK who signed the bill permitting the FCC to levy fines for minor violations without due process. The fines were $100 per violation with a maximum of $500 (Popular Electronics, September 1962). I also read that the distance rules were established for two reasons: First, the Canadian hams were still using 11m; and second, to discourage the use of CB radio as a method of international communication, which was a big deal during the cold war. Well, the cold war is over, and the internet is crossing the communication barriers between borders much more than CB ever could. It's time the FCC took a second look at that rule.

It's a matter of government enforcement of current moral standards to public venues. Non-public venues are wide open to free speech, as cable TV and the internet prove millions of times each day. And while the internet and cable TV may be considered to be public venues by some, the broadcast stations have, and will always have, a much broader public domain simply because they are not subscriber-based services.

The ink is still wet on the "public record" which was retrieved in bits and pieces by the Pentagon (which is run by Rumsfeld and Cheney, in case you had forgotten). Your position would be more believable if those records came from Kansas, which is where the SRBs are archived.

Exactly! And do you know why? Because those left-wing radicals, atheists, and elitist liberals are not organized under the common goal of Christian societal dominance. They still believe in the right to freedom of religion, and seperation of church and state.

First off, tell me something -good- that has happened in Iraq. Second, every side spins things their way. Third, Moore is not a 527 group.

Fourth, the "mainstream media" is biased in both directions. And fifth, you forgot to mention the station affiliation ownership issue;
i.e, Sinclair, which is buddy-buddy with Bush (and may be responsible in part for seating Powell the Younger as FCC Chairman). So it's nice to see that Bush's tactics are subject to Newton's third law.

Speaking of "buying votes", what do you think those tax rebate checks were for? Don't you think it would have been easier (and much more economical to the US) to simply incorporate the tax breaks into the annual tax returns? Absolutely! But Bush -wanted- those extra checks printed, and any psychologist who didn't sleep through the Pavlovian
S-R lecture can tell you why.

The facts of that mess are not fully known -- and will probably never be fully known. I find it difficult to believe that companies from the US were not involved, especially considering that this country has some of the most opportunistic people on the earth (a fine example of which is Halliburton which, at last reports, is still doing business in Iran).

Halliburton was contracted to rebuild Iraq's infrastructure, of which oil is only a part. The time requirements were not a constraint because the plan to invade Iraq was made -before- we invaded Afghanistan -- there was -plenty- of time to take bids on reconstruction contracts contingent upon the invasion. And it was obvious in the early days of the invasion that Iraq wasn't going to put up nearly the fight they did in the first invasion, so there was absolutely no need to cause so much -more- destruction to the infrastructure than we did in the first war -- except, of course, to inflate the reconstruction costs. And that's exactly what happened.

>>If he doesn't (and he won't because that would

>If this is all about oil, then why haven't we seen gallon one of it?

But you have. Haven't you seen the recent TV commercials for Shell gasoline? It's been a long time since you've seen commercials from them, hasn't it? Shell is basically the Iraqi Oil Company, and is owned and operated by Iraq with partners in the US and UK. The business has been on hiatus since Saddam took power. (And now you know why the UK was our only unwavering ally in this war!)

>Why have we so steadily maintained that Iraq control its own future?

Iraq -was- controlling it's own future. The problem was that it's future didn't include Iraqi cooperation with US coporate interests.

>How can we pull of this grand deception of "looting" Iraqi oil, while >setting them up to be a self governed democracy?

The same way that equipment and supplies from chemical and nuclear facilities were looted right under our noses -- position the troops away from coporate activities, look the other way while the country gets robbed, and if you get caught just plead ignorance and fire a few military generals and Pentagon advisors. That's probably how it will play out with the oil-for-food scandal, too.

Other countries understand that the leadership of the US changes. I haven't heard of this declaration of non-cooperation by France and Germany, but even if they did that will be a matter for diplomacy. Bush's diplomacy was to snub his nose at these countries, and that kind of damage isn't easy to fix. But it -must- be fixed or there will never be another true coalition. If it takes some brown-nosing, so be it because the long-term interests of the US are far more important than taking one on the chin for the mistakes of past presidents.

......WHAT?!?!? Kerry had no authority to declare ANYBODY a war criminal, let alone have any direct effect on the incarceration or torture of any POW, mainly because NK didn't abide by the Geneva convention anyway! Kerry exercised his right to freedom of speech by speaking out against the war and it's atrocities. If the POWs didn't like it then they have to take that up with Kerry. But while they do that, maybe they should say a word or two about draft dodgers!!!

And while we are on the subject of the Geneva convention, maybe you should take a long, hard look at Rumsfeld and the treatment of prisoners from both Iraq and Afghanistan!

If it hangs there, it hangs there with John McCain's picture because the two of them went to Vietnam to investigate the reports of POWs and re-established diplomatic relations with the government, WHICH, by the way, has been the best thing to happen to Vietnam since before the French. It's a perfect example of how proper diplomacy is much more powerful than an army, it's how we won the cold war, and it's a lesson that Bush is unwilling to learn.

>In other words, HE LIED.

Lack of evidence is why Scott Peterson will walk, but that doesn't mean he didn't do the crime. And just for your information, there were many, many documented cases of war crimes in Vietnam that were never prosecuted. Some were, but most weren't because the problem was not with the troops but with the leadership, and generals rarely face a court-martial for their crimes -- they are usually reassigned or forced to retire. That's not right, but that's what happens.

I don't think -either- of them have the qualifications to be president. But accusing Kerry of being a traitor is pretty low.

Back to the topic of paranoia, let me give you a clue: I was a Marine from 81 through 85. My MOS was 2841, a ground radio repairman, which includes a wide variety of radio gear. The MOS is also trained in crypto gear used with that gear, including the VINSON system. This requires not just a security clearance for the equipment but for the communications passed with that equipment. I had a pretty good job.

I was one of two 2841's that floated to Beirut in 1984 on the USS Nassau. After we arrived, our shop chief, SSgt Urban (aka, Urbanovich) decided to place a tech in the US/UK embassy. Urban's golden-boy was Cpl. Farelly who was sent first, but after a month he got kicked out of Beirut for starting a fight in a nearby bar (and got his ass kicked). After returning Farelly pleaded with Urban not to allow me (the other tech) the opportunity to succeed where he had failed, and Urban agreed. So I didn't sleep at the embassy, but I got a lot of frequent-flyer miles in the helicopters.

Anyway, the work I did at the embassy was general repair and maintenance, as well as fixing a few things Farelly fucked up, like removing a right-angle connector he put on a UHF line. And that UHF line went to a URM-201 (satellite radio) which happened to be in the office on the other end of the hall from the ambassador's office, and the name on that office door was Major North (yes, Oliver North).

So I was privy to a lot of information. I can't say a word about most of what I know, but I will say this: Major North's orders came from VP Bush under a blanket authorization from John Lehman (then Sec. of the Navy, and more recently on the 9/11 commission). The orders did -not- come from Reagan; on the contrary, Reagan knew very little about what was going on because Bush intentionally kept him in the dark (it's that 'plausible deniability' thing I mentioned before).

In previous posts I have mentioned some of the crap North was doing in Beirut, but not the reason why. A few years ago you might have seen an interview with Noriega, where he tells -his- side of the story. Well, he was 100% right. The US went into Panama to retake the canal that Carter had signed away in 1979 in anticipation of the construction of the Nicaraguan canal. But the N-canal was put on hold after the US-led puppet government/dictatorship fell. Enter the Contras, who were basically US-backed communists fighting a Soviet-backed democracy! Well, we all know how -that- turned out, so the only option left was to take back the P-canal by force, which is exactly what daddy Bush did. The document signed by Carter, turning over the canal to Panama in 1999, was officially voided.

And there is another thing I learned in North's office. At that time he was drafting the structure of what would become FEMA. Now if you think I'm paranoid, just take a look at how FEMA is organized and the power it has. That's no mistake -- it was carefully planned by North and others who took the movie "Dr. Strangelove" very seriously. If a national disaster happens, there are bunkers where people can live quite comfortably for many years, but they can't take everyone. In fact, they can't take very many at all. Places in the bunkers are reserved for the elite; basically, the bunkers are for the corporate tycoons and political heavy-hitters. Everyone else must suffer.

If you think -that's- paranoid, check this out: There is part of the FEMA plan that provides a "remedy" in the case of an "incomplete" disaster. IOW, if the asteroid doesn't kill everybody (that doesn't have a reserved seat in the bunkers), there are plans to finish off the survivors so there will be no resistance when the trogs emerge from their caves. I shit you not!

And here's something you probably already know: Much of the classified information is classified because it's illegal. Such as weapons that violate the Geneva convention, practices that disregard constitutional rights, contracts that circumvent international treaties, etc, etc. This is the way it has been for many years, at least back to the Eisenhower administration when the CIA overthrew Guatemala (hmmm.... was daddy Bush part of that...?).

Now if you still think I'm paranoid, then my response to you is that maybe Milton was right and ignorance -is- bliss, but I would rather be paranoid than ignorant.

Oh I don't doubt you heard activity on that "channel". But I've never heard of "the colonel" and I've been in and out of CB since 75!!

It might have been a local trying to mess with people. You said you "heard him". What did he say? Did he threaten people? Correct people? Or did he act like an ass like some of the "half-baked-hams" we have on this ng that I have to re-killfile every 15 minutes?

What message was this "colonel" giving?

ENFORCEMENT: CB AMP SALE BRINGS $7000 FINE

A North Jackson, Ohio equipment retailer has been dinged with a heavy fine. This for allegedly selling those illegal 11 meter amplifiers that the C-B crowd calls footwarmers.

The noted violations involve Paladen Communications sale of external Citizens Band radio frequency power amplifiers. In it's October 21st Forfeiture Order the FCC alleges that Paladen, which does business as the CB Shop, did willfully and repeatedly violate Section 302(b) of the Communications Act of 1934 and Sections 2.815(b) and 2.815(c) of the Commission's Rules by making these units available to the general public.

Paladen was issued the $7,000 fine back on May 27th. The FCC says the company never responded to the notice. Its now been given 30 days to pay or face collection proceedings. (FCC)

This as the FCC fines Robert A. Spiry of Tacoma 10,000 for what the FCC say was operating a radio station without Commission authorization. Amateur Radio Newsline's Norm Seeley, KI7UP, has the details: -- In its letter to Robert A. Spiry, the FCC claims that it found the amplifier as part of a follow-up investigation. This, after receiving numerous complaints from Spiry's neighbors. On March 13th, April 2nd, October 29th and November 5th of 2002, agents from the Commission's Seattle, Washington Field Office concluded that the interference resulted from 11 meter transmissions originating from Spiry's residence and from his mobile station in his vehicle. During station inspections conducted on April 2nd and November 5th, 2002, the Seattle Office agents determined that Spiry was operating transmitters that were not FCC certified and that he was operating with a linear amplifier attached to his CB radio transmitter. Spiry was advised that his use of unauthorized and non- certified equipment voided his blanket authority to operate his CB station. Nevertheless, the FCC says that he continued to operate the unauthorized equipment at the expense of his blanket authorization to operate his CB radio station. On December 30th, 2002, the Seattle Office issued a Notice of Apparent Liability for Monetary Forfeiture in the amount of $10,000 to Spiry. In other words, a $10,000 fine. In his January 15, 2003 response Spiry did not dispute the facts that lead to the fine. Instead he stated that he had ceased CB radio transmissions and had obtained an amateur radio license. The FCC database lists him as holding a Technician class license with the call sign KD7TRB. He also claimed to have removed his CB radio antenna and asserted that he was unaware that the amount of the forfeiture could be so high. He told the FCC that he was unable to pay that amount. But in affirming the fine the FCC refers Spiry to Section 301 of the Communications Act. It says that no person shall use or operate any apparatus for the transmission of energy or communications or signals by radio within the United States without a proper license. The FCC says that Spiry's 2002 operation of his CB radio station with transmitters that were not FCC certified and use of a linear amplifier constitutes repeated violations. It also notes that his taking down the C-B antenna and getting a ham radio ticket are not sufficient actions to negate the punishment for the original offenses. The FCC says that Robert Spiry has not provided it with adequate financial information from which to determine his ability to pay the forfeiture. Based on this lack of information cancellation or reduction of the $10,000 fine is not warranted and that it stands as is.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, Norm Seeley, KI7UP, Scottsdale, Arizona. -- Spiry was given the usual 30 days to pay. If he fails to do so the FCC says that the matter may be turned over to the Department of Justice for further action. (FCC)

And THAT is what anyone who is anti-Bush faces on a daily basis...being labeled a Kerry supporter. To be honest to yourself, now you must figure who is lesser of two evils, as neither is fit to lead a Cub Scout troop, much less the only superpower left on the planet.

The other thing is, I do not want my children involved in a war that was started by a semi draft dodger to support his oil buddies. If he stays in power, there will be a draft, no matter what he says. If it were for our freedoms here at home, or to support some really noble cause, I might have a different view, but this war is clearly about oil, and he's spinning it as a "War on Terror". Saddam had nothing to do with 9-11, and this truth has been proven over and over. These stupid little ribbons are displayed by people who have allowed GW to confuse them in the 5 minutes of network news they watch daily.

You guessed wrong, but that's OK, you're in PA, and we all know what comes BTW, it apparently got your attention.

If over 50% of the voters made their choices based on facts and logic

I was on inactive reserve for 2 years after my discharge from 4 years of active duty. The troops commonly referred to as "reservists" are on 'active reserve'.

Good observation, Twist

As to a possible draft, I doubt it matters who gets in the White House. Things are really messed up in Iraq. One thing which troubles me greatly is that Bush ignored his military commanders who advised him to go in with more troops. At least his father got in and got out. Now the situation is a real mess and they have called up the "ready reserve". Some of those folks are refusing to go to duty. Who makes up the ready reserve? Well, for those who have not served, the first time enlistment may be for a certain number of years (in my case, 4) of active duty. However, you are still considered "ready reserve" for a few more years. This is not the same as signing into the reserves. Those folks can get called up at any time. The ready reserves are called up after all other resources have been used. Not only have they called up ready reserves, they have called up some retirees! There was a story of one doctor in his 60s receiving a letter asking if he felt he could perform his duty. He replied in the affirmative and was recalled to active duty.

Beyond the military mess, we have a deficit that is huge. Regardless of who gets into the White House, you can bet that taxes will have to be raised. We've lost millions of jobs (did you notice an uptic in the unemployment rate again? Remember they cut unemployment from 1 year to six months despite the unemployment rate being as high as when they extended it to 1 year? Election year politics?) and just who do they think is going to cover that deficit? The Chinese workers at 30 cents per hour? <<VBG>>

Bush and company have turned this into a "national defense" and "gay marriage" issue. They have absolutely nothing else going for themselves.

Hang on to your wallet, this is going to be a bumpy ride.

Hello, Frank and Twist

By jingles - look at this. The three of us agreeing LOL.
Thanks for the term "inactive reserve". I had heard "ready reserve" and posted as such elsewhere, but think your term is more accurate. They have even called up retirees!

I'd hate to think of Bush in for another 4 years, but if Kerry is elected, everyone will blame him for a draft and raising taxes. Honestly, I don't think it can be avoided. The longer we drag our feet, the worse it will get.

There will be no more draft. Was it father Bush who said "read my lips"?

Unfortunately, there will likely be a draft. I hope not, but we don't have enough troops. If Kerry is elected, he is going to have to figure a way out of the mess. He just might be able to kiss up to the U.N. and get help, but I wouldn't bet the farm. Regardless of who is in office, we are probably stuck facing a decade or more of paying for this whole mess. Higher taxes and, likely, a draft.

The longer we wait on taxes, the deeper in debt we become.

As to the war on terror, Bush was unable to get Bin Laden. When we were hitting Afghanistan (and I supported that to try and get Bin Laden), Bush warned that our target could shift. At that point I suspected he was going to go after Iraq. An easy target. I don't believe that they ever found evidence of Iraq supporting terrorism (they had enough problems with U.N. sanctions) and they certainly never found weapons of mass destruction (although the die-hard right wing claims they could have been moved. Moved where? Certainly not after the invasion. Perhaps he moved them to Israel? LOL

No, my first choice would not be Kerry, but my only choice is not Bush. Just wait until the working families making $60,000 or a bit more find out what is waiting for them with the "alternative minimum tax". Meanwhile, only 15% maximum tax on capital gains. Any wonder why businesses are gutting each other? I can't blame the business owners or CEOs. They know the party can't last forever. Unfortunately, it is the working folks who are bearing the brunt of this misguided effort.

How about that -- I predicted something like this just one day before it happened. And notice that the tape was released to the US before it was aired. When was the last time -that- happened? And the CIA declared the tape authentic within hours of its release. Again, when was the last time -that- happened?

I think the video was a fake, just like the Berg video. I think they got UBL a long time ago, probably just before Bush's press conference where he says that he's not worried about UBL -- that was a slip of the tongue. And now they fabricate this tape full of threats in order to raise Bush's fear-based campaign to a fevered climax. Wag the dog.

I expect the terror alert level will be raised just before the election. I'm also expecting something like a "terrorist cell" bust, with claims (and probably some 'evidence') that it was ready to execute a large-scale attack. Or something along those lines.

Only time will tell if I'm right or just paranoid.

The term 'inactive reserve' was the term when I was discharged. It may have changed since then (after all, quite a few things have changed since then).

>everyone will blame him for a draft and raising taxes. Honestly, I don't

I think the draft can be avoided if Kerry jumps right into dialogs with UN member nations that can help. He has to convince them that the US is willing to take a 179 degree turn with it's "don't interfere or else" policy. He will also have to tackle the Halliburton issue head-on, probably by putting a freeze on the contracts pending a comprehensive investigation. Such an action will force neighboring Arab nations to get involved in cooperation with the UN, and only -that- will legitimize the new Iraqi government. And that way help comes not just directly from the UN but also indirectly from the Arab community. And Kerry must also announce a 'fixed-or-not' withdrawl date. Reparations will be costly, but not as costly as keeping half our military in Iraq for several more years.

So it can be done. But on the flip side, I don't think Kerry has the strength or the leadership abilities to get the job done alone. It will depend on what kind of support he receives from Congress, which is also in a state of campaign flux right now.

And if Bush gets re-elected, it's very possible that Congress is going to end up democrat-heavy and Bush just might be impeached. He might even be indicted for any one of his many crimes, not the least of which would be misleading Congress into this war.

So it's hard to say what will happen.

Hello, Frank

I've been in touch with a friend in England. He informs me that Tony Blair claimed that if weapons of mass destruction were not found, Saddam would not be touched. So, things are dicey in merry old England, too.

This election is really up for grabs. The radical right is closing ranks, but a lot of folks are upset too. I wouldn't bet a plugged nickel either way as to what will happen. I honestly do fear for what will happen with the deficit and draft is Bush is re-elected.

Just my opinion, and, should Bush get back in, I sincerely hope that I am wrong - but I doubt it.

Hey Martin, I have schematics and a freq mod for the Alan 48 if you still need it.
If your 148 is the old style you can go here for mods http://thexlclub.tripod.com/
They are for the grant XL. Same as the old 148. Mine will key 2.5 and swing 20. Lots of great mods on this site.

It'll also bleed over like a bitch. Some of those coils you're spreading and compressing are part of the output filter. It's not "real" power you're gaining, it's the undesired signals that are now being allowed out of the TX chain.

4 watts on one channel is alot louder than 20 watts on all 40 at once.

Yeah good call:

I got my old Motorola System 550 Radio out and been chatting with the locals this morning. Man this radio has a built in noise blanker than works great. Usually I listen in on my Icom 760, the older version, and it has a fantastic noise reduction circuit in it. I get some power line noise at times.

We are getting ready to have Saturday morning breakfast, with all the CB'ers and Ham guys. We have a separate room at the restraunt with a long table set aside for us. Its great to go out and meet all the people once and a while.

I am gonna have Steak and Eggs, fruit salad, and coffee. I love when the Waitress slams down the coffee and asks: "Whats ya gonna have Hon"

Jay in the Great Mojave Desert, ... just down the road ah ways from the fillin station.

Miss Dinah down at the fillin station has Game Bird Loads in 12 and 20 gages, for a real reasonable price. These are hand re-loaded by Mountain Man (who also has the local 2M and 220 repeater) these loads seem to be able to be effective thru some bushs, as the factory loads aren't. Mole got 6 Quail last weekend with em!

Hi Don! Thanks for the reply. The "Colonel" used a varierty of responses when we transmitted down there. Usually, he wanted to know where we were, and used a tone of voice (very authoritive) that we were not supposed to be operating on that frequency. We were in our early teens, so we were worried.

True, he could have been anyone, with any agenda. Besides the local gossip and chatter about the "Colonel", I did speak to a local HAM down the street who said that this Colonel was some sort of gov official, perhaps with the FCC, but as I soon found out, Hams didn't like us CB-ers much, and of course scolded us when we said what frequency we operated on.

As for the other reply, asking if we switched channel 10 crystals in our walkie talkies to get -20, no...it was channel 11. Other brand walkie talkies didn't give the same results as ours. We found that out, and I know why that is.

Anyway, thanks everyone for the replies. The Colonel phenomenon was fascinating, and just one of those early CB experiences that I've always wondered about.

Hi , Does anybody know what brand of CB Receivers Receive the best in signal clarity and audio.
I have a Sonar FS23 Tube Radio which outperforms regular new transistor cb radios on Receive Signal Clarity, audio and DX.
The ones I have Tested that I have did a fair to poor Job. I also tried using an external speaker incase the speaker in the radio was not adequate for the radio. Lets here your Results from other cb radios ??.
Sonar FS23 base - Very Good on audio receive Realistic TRC30a 1976 base was fair to good on audio receive.
Realistic TRC24c Mobile 23 1976 Was Fair to good.
Realistic TRC421 Mobile 40 channel 1979 was fair to good.
Realistic TRC480 40 channel Single Side band cb / mobile 1980 was fair.
Realistic TRC493 40 channel mobile CB with DSP 1996 was Fair Cobra 39XLR 40 channel cb 1979 was just fair on receive.
Johnson Messenger 323A 23 Channel cb 1976 was Fair - Good.
SBE - SkyFone 23 channel CB 1977 was fair to good.
GE - 23 Channel CB 1977 was Good on Receive.

I haven't found a transistor radio that could match a good tube rig as far as sensitivity. The best I've found:

Regency "Range Gain" -- Excellent S/N, selectivity and ACR!
Hallicrafters CB-3A -- Like the Regency but slightly higher S/N.
Hallmark 512 -- Absolutely the LOWEST S/N, selectivity is average.

But the best of the best are the Poly-Comm models "Pro" and "23".
(Anybody got one they want to sell or trade?)

Look around the neighborhoods, and I'll bet you will find one. Most folks will be happy to have someone take it down.

Don't but the cheap Italian copy of the Starduster, is is the finest piece of junk money can buy. I bought one for a guy, and I had to modify it so the lose parts didn't make a intermittent connection.

I'll bet if you keep an eye on E-Bay you will run across a few antennas.

I got quit a few antennas this way for testing and custom made antennas.

I have bought antennas off e-bay there where trashed, and some in good condation.

Typical Problem , There are 4 germanium diodes in between the input and output connectors on a small board. 2 of them are voltage dividers and 2 of them are for forward / reflected power . Most likely "1" of those germanium diodes is open , this would give you exact 1/2 reading.

As I live on a fixed disabilty income I have to watch what I can get and the ones I've seen on ebay have gone outside of my price range and not having a car to drive around Rosamond with, it'd be hard to fine any. I may end up sticking a 102 steel whip on top of this trailer I live in. Got to be carefull about keying down what with all the t.v. ants so close around here.

My last Starduster was one I got at a yard sale back in the 80's, had broken lower radis, so I used some amm tubing to fix them and had it on a pole so that it was just about 5ft off the ground on a hillside.

With no radio shops around here I've not seen anything in the way of what's being sold now a days.

I'd even go for a Super Scanner elec. beam or a PDL. Bet that dates me.

Transmitter:
12 Watts P.E.P. on SSB - Free
4 Watts AM - Free
Try a speech processor rather than an amplified mic, much cleaner audio.
(IMHO) Google up Astatic's version or the SP-1a. - Approx. $60

Receiver:
Increase your ACR by adding the CBCI Channel Guard filter kit. - Approx. $70
If you still have the dough to burn, add a SGC ADSP2 DSP board. The results are nothing short of astounding! - Approx. $225

Best of luck. :-)

I set a radio/streamer up at a friends house a cple months ago. Saint Petersburg FL. Requires windows media player but it worked well. I'll have to go over there to restart it since we took it down for the hurricanes. It's just a tap off his radio's speaker jack so it streams whatever channel he happens to be on. Mostly 35am, 29fm, 555usb.

I'll re-post to this thread when I have reconnected it. Should be soon. I want to listen too when I'm in my apartment. It also transmits with the software I wrote, but we reserve that for a select few. ;-)

Hello, Jim

A prevaricator is an individual who quibbles, lies, etc.

Either that, or it is a new form of voltage variable capacitor :)

The power reading on a deadkey is OK. It's just low on the peak reading during modulation. Would the diodes do that or could it be a capacitor?

well, 50 bucks will get you a A99, not a terrible choice...but one that will last ten years or so. I have found and rebuilt several stardusters. Just collect radials and all you'll need is the hub. If you need a manual, just email me & Ill give it. come to think of it, I have a hub with a scanner antenna mounted on it for indoor use in the garage...I even screwed in 3 fiberglass 4 foot whips and it worked fine....I collect and am given lots of antenna stuff... My latest project was to build my own JoGunn style 3 element (x3) antenna...I had just enough radials and gamma match..I am finishing the hubs and already sold it for 125 bucks. Hadn't even talked on it yet... No rotor included... my 2 cents. Down south , If I had the time I could have gotten hundreds of antenna's from Ivan damage.

You forget that there was/is an ITU requirement that "international" two way radio services require the operator to have a knowledge of Morse Code. That was a primary reason why long distance contacts were prohibited on CB.

Hi Dave,

The ITU treaty agreement applied to the amateur radio, not the CB. I found this out when Alan Dixon petitioned the FCC to drop the 155.3 mi. rule, RM-9807. Which leads me to...

Over the past few mos., every candidate/incumbent for public office has sent a campaign flyer of some sort and we've all had out mailboxes filled with this stuff. One of the best things we can do for the CB is to set up a form letter asking said candidate/incumbent to "inquire" about dropping the 155.3 mi. limit for the CB radio service and why the FCC acknowledged that the majority of CBers were in favor of this yet chose to cater to a few private interest groups.

Simply fill in the name and address and send this to every candidate/incumbent who sends you a flyer. All that's really needed is for them to make a casual inquiry. Having now been somewhat involved with lobbying and witnessing how these "inquiries" are generated, I can say with some certainty that ten (Yep, just 10.) letters usually warrants a casual phone call or letter.

Try researching how the amateur radio vanity call program came into existence...just a letter to the right desk (Non-FCC) after having an official RM-petition turned down. It's an amusing story in any case and demonstrates what can be accomplished if more than a few people get of their duffs and just make an effort.

As I live on a fixed disabilty income I have to watch what I can get and the ones I've seen on ebay have gone outside of my price range and not having a car to drive around Rosamond with, it'd be hard to fine any. I may end up sticking a 102 steel whip on top of this trailer I live in. Got to be carefull about keying down what with all the t.v. ants so close around here.
My last Starduster was one I got at a yard sale back in the 80's, had broken lower radis, so I used some amm tubing to fix them and had it on a pole so that it was just about 5ft off the ground on a hillside.
With no radio shops around here I've not seen anything in the way of what's being sold now a days.
I'd even go for a Super Scanner elec. beam or a PDL. Bet that dates me.

The price range for what you would pay for a Super Scanner or PDL II will cover an array of new antennas so your choice there should be plentiful. Try a dipole, two or three. Use a stock microphone and a good ground. While camping, I've used antrons in trees strapped with bungee cords in the past with excellent results and at one point, I too had a 102 inch fiberglass on a pole at one time. SWR was tricky at first, but when I brought it down to an otherwise acceptable level, it worked quite well.

What you are doing is engaging in conspiratorial speculation. There is no doubt that Bush was honorably discharged. The seed that his detractors have tried to plant was that Bush's honorable discharge was "bought". But there is no hard evidence to support it. Those silly papers which Dan Rather was so anxious to reveal turned out to be bogus, and it did nothing more than show just how left biased the major news media outlets are. They didn't even do the leg work

Yea.... But those left wing people are embracing the concept of the

No, he's a biased and socially confused idiot with the capability to

The major news outlets with the exception of Fox are ALL slanted to the left. If that isn't crystal clear after this election, you really need to stab yourself with a fork to wake up. The zeal that those same outlets jump on stories which bash Bush, should be evidence enough. While equally compelling stories about Kerry's anti-war and borderline treasonist activities in the 1970's have been deliberately and decisively passed over. If not for the alternative media of the Internet and specialized news sources, we would never know half of that stuff.

To see the extent that the rest of the media outlets and political pundits have tried to prevent the showing of Stolen Honor highlight just how biased those other media outlets are. These things you point out just mirror this. By exposing those few affiliates which lean to the right only highlights how far to the left the rest are.

>Bush's diplomacy was to snub his nose at these countries, and that You have it backwards. Countries like France and Germany snubbed their noses at us when we asked them to join our quest. Now, answer me this:

Should those countries be allowed to stand in our way and force our foreign policy? They refused to help and we left them behind and did it with those countries who shared our concern (and weren't dipping in the oil for food till).

> But it -must- be fixed or there will never be another true coalition.

Necessity breeds coalitions. I'm sure the French didn't have much bad to say about us when we drove the Germans out during WWII. When it comes time to save their sorry butts, they'l suddenly change their tune.

Kerry's testimony that the US Army "routinely" engaged in atrocities tortured even more brutally as a result. If you don't believe me,

With all due respect Frank, what you knew is over 20 years old now, and has little bearing on the current mid-east situation. It's far too easy to say things like "I saw a lot of things, but I can't tell you about the details". Eliminating accountability is way too convenient, and it's the stuff that the National Enquirer is made of.

If it makes me ignorant that I only deal in facts and details that I can positively verify, and dealing with probable scenarios by the judicious application of Occam's razor, instead of buying into each and every wild shadow government conspiracy theory, then so be it. I don't know if I still have it or it got dumped sometime, but I used to have a hub from a cb ant that was shaped like a SD'er but was for indoor usage, having fiberglass top and down elements. It was my first one as I lived in an Apart. at the time I got started. I'd have to search my storage boxs and that is something I don't look forward too.

If I get a car, I'll not set up a base, but go mobil instead. Right now I have a Sear 40ch AM, as every time I tried for a SSB on ebay the price shotguned way over my limits.

As it was explained to me some time ago, the ITU requirement covered ALL personal two-way radio services (Including ham, CB, land mobile, maritime etc.) This was even given as one reason why the FCC was not willing to eliminate the 150 mile limit for CB. They basically "passed the buck" by stating that they were prevented by international law from making a change which would allow the CB service to have contacts which could be international. If that's no longer correct, there there is really no reason to keep the 155 mile limit.

With all the really major issues surrounding this year's campaign, I doubt if something so relatively trivial in nature would be given much consideration.

A long while back UBL wrote an open letter to the American people. It said in summary that we had to renounce Israel and help destroy that country and that we must convert to Islam and submit to Koranic justice, or he would see us all dead. What part of "see us all dead" is too complicated for liberals to understand?

Paranoia? Hardly.

"I hate Bush" bullcrap thinly disguised as ignorance? Looks like it to me.

Swan sold a lot of equipment and a lot of people were very satisified with it. Yes they might drift a little but all the radios of that time did. Swan was one of the first to make a transceiver if not the first.
Swan was a key player in our history so go knock Collins that should have been right up at the top that also had numerous problems. Swan gave the rest of us something to operate if the person wasn't a homebrew type so rich.

To Decent Conservatives and Recovering Republicans:

In your heart of hearts you know Bush is a miserable failure.
From having no plan on what to do in Iraq once he conquered Baghdad to the 380 missing tons of explosives that could be used to kill our brave young men and women, this guy doesn't have a clue how to fight and win a war. You should see the mail I've been getting lately from our troops over there. They know how much the Iraqi people hate them. They are sitting ducks anytime they go out on the road. Many believe we are not that far away from a Tet-style offensive inside the Green Zone with hundreds of Americans and Brits killed.
Bush refused to go after and capture Osama bin Laden. He fought, every step of the way, the investigation into the 9/11 attacks. Who on earth would oppose such a thing? If 3,000 people died at your place of work and your boss said we don't need to find out why or how it happened, he'd be thrown out on his ear. Bush's behavior after this great tragedy alone is reason enough for his removal.
You already know that George W. Bush is the farthest thing from a conservative. He's a reckless spender who has run up record-breaking deficits and the biggest debt in our history. He believes in having the government pry into everything from your library records to your bedroom. He has hit you with hidden taxes with his tax cuts for the rich.
I know many of you don't like Bush, but are unsure of Kerry. Give the new guy a chance. He won't raise your taxes (unless you are super-rich), he won't take your hunting gun away, and he won't make you visit France. He risked his life for you many years ago. He's asking for the chance to do it again. Scott McConnell at The American Conservative magazine has endorsed him. What more do you need?

Nobody is suggesting you should. But you -should- look at facts from outside of the spin room. Just because one Republican goes on TV and supports the story of another Republican doesn't make it a 'fact'. The only fact is that this campaign if full of statistics that have been spun, words that have been distorted from their meanings, and logical fallacies that are more common than flies on shit. And it's coming from a couple dozen different sides, including both the Democrats -and- the Republicans. "Facts" are the bits of information that fit into the logical puzzle, and no matter how hard a party might pound on a piece to make it fit, you have to step back and take a look at the picture to see that it doesn't. If you like abstract art then you should probably vote for Bush. But I guarantee that I'm going to be Even though I agree with you Frank, the "I told you so" is a double edged

That's what was told to me at first too, until Alan enlightened me and the difference between the amateur radio vs. land mobile service as they relate to the ITU was clarified. (No pun intended.)

That's the beauty of it, Dave. It wouldn't take "much" consideration at all. BTW, when an elected official receives more than nine letters/calls regarding ANY issue, it ceases to be "trivial in nature"...that, from the horses mouth. Remember, all that's needed is a casual inquiry. Did you check out the origins of the amateur vanity call program?

Neither is capable of publically acknowledging the accomplishments of the other. That's the way of partisan politics, and that's what people get when they vote the 2-party cartel -- lots of bickering and little progress. Kinda like rrcb.

I do? How?

>From having no plan on what to do in Iraq

So you have the inside track to the government's military planning? I would think that the details of such plans are deliberately kept secret for security reasons. That being said, this is a far cry from "Having no plan". That is a Kerry buzz phrase, and is about as accurate as "tax breaks for the rich", when EVERY tax payer got a refund.

> once he conquered Baghdad to >the 380 missing tons of explosives that could be used to kill our

So you bought into the DNC smear propaganda eh? That whole issue has already been debunked. Those explosives were gone before we got there. It's also not surprising that the DNC spinmeisters would choose to look at the negatives over the positives. We have already secured and/or destroyed over 500 tons of similar explosives. If you'd rather concentrate on one potential "oh shit" over a bunch of "attaboys" that says something about your insight. Besides, It's last week's news. That Kerry would degrade our military to use as pawns in his game to smear Bush is deplorable. Kerry is a man with no principles. He's little more than a political opportunist. Hell, he couldn't even issue a definitive statement on Bin Ladens video without taking a poll first.

>, this guy doesn't have a clue how to fight >and win a war.

Oh I don't know. Free elections in Afghanistan, Saddam Hussein removed from power, 75% of Al Qaeda command and control operatives killed or captured. Osama Bin Laden is on the run, and reduced to sending video tapes instead of explosives to make his point. Iraq will be having free elections in January. I'd say we accomplished quite a bit.

> You should see the mail I've been getting lately from

I'm sure is legit..... NOT!

Some Iraqi people hate them. Those who were not doing so well under Saddam's oppression are not so hateful. I believe it's another word that rhymes with hateful. More like grateful.

>They are sitting ducks anytime they go out on the road. Many believe War is hell. People die. That's a fact of life. But if you are not willing to take a few casualties in the name of just cause, then why even have a military. No one (except the terminally clueless liberals) expected that the war on terror would either be quick or easy. This is not Hollywood. This is reality.

75 to 80% of the military vote is expected to support the president which is why DNC hacks have done everything they can to prevent the absentee ballots from military people from reaching the polls.

> Bush refused to go after and capture Osama bin Laden.

Refused? We've been hunting OBL since we started. Since we don't have free reign to just storm into each and every country he hides in, it makes it a tough battle. OBL is likely either hiding in Pakistan or Iran. Neither place will allow our troops to hunt him on their turf.

No, you have it wrong. Bush originally opposed the creation of the 9/11 commission because he didn't fell it was necessary. But once it was created, he didn't oppose it. He was hesitant to open testimony before the commission for what should be obvious security concerns.

Really? I don't think that. He shares many of my conservative values.

Hello? We're AT WAR! Of course spending will increase. Are we to stop funding our troops because we're afraid of a little debt?

> He >believes in having the government pry into everything from your >library records to your bedroom. He has hit you with hidden taxes with >his tax cuts for the rich.

Proof please. Name a bill that Bush has championed which increases taxes on the common citizens. You have Bush confused with Kerry here. Kerry WILL raise taxes if he wins. Assuming you can do simple math, add it all up. Kerry wants to:

A. Continue the war in Iraq and terror in general. He has pledged not to "cut and run".
B. Somehow subsidize healthcare.
C. Increase funding for social programs.
D. Buy down the debt.
E. Give "additional" tax breaks to middle class families.

Yet to fund all this new spending (and yet you trash Bush for spending?) Kerry expects us to believe that he will do all this by only rollling back the tax breaks for the top 2% of wage earners. Now, does the math add up to you? It doesn't to me.

The facts are that Kerry is the most liberal senator in the congress. His records are there for all to see. He is on record opposing spending for military projects, and our intelligence agencies. He's been on the wrong side of the fence on most issues throughout his senate career. Why would you think he'll change when the oval office is his?

I do. And those facts are clearly in Bush's favor.

>supports the story of another Republican doesn't make it a 'fact'.

No, but it is a fact that Saddam is in jail, Iraq will be holding elections, Afghanistan is holding elections, OBL is on the run and has had his network of terror severely disrupted. Other wise he would have send us a bomb instead of a videotape the other day.

It's a fact that I got a tax break thanks to Mr. Bush. And guess what?
I'm not "rich".

While Mr. Kerry and the DNC often touts the fact that we have lost jobs during Bush's reign It is disingenuous to suggest that this is somehow Bush's "fault". Anyone who understands economics knows that the economy ebbs and flows independent on any sitting president. There is no single piece of legislation which was signed by Bush, which can be deemed responsible for our recent recession. In fact, the recession was predicted back in early 1999, when the dot come bubble was inflating at a rate which could not be supported by actual corporate profit. For that, Clinton is one of the luckiest guys on the planet, as his term was just about over when the bubble burst. We were already on the down turn before Bush even took office. The recession was declared before Bush passed his first budget. Those are the facts.

Outsourcing is a fact of life as long as we live in a world economy. It's no longer a choice. If an American based company wants to manufacture the same goods as foreign competitors, they need to be price competitive. There is no way a product made with the labor of a $20/hr union worker can compete with labor from a third world country. The choice becomes painfully simple. Either we seek cheaper labor, or we lose market share. Legislation, and tariffs only increase the cost of good for us consumers, and add to inflation. Giving corporate tax breaks for companies who do not outsource will not make up the difference in labor costs. Penalizing companies who do outsource will only force those corporations to move their corporate offices completely out of the country. Then we will not only lose manufacturing jobs, but the technical support, management and logistics positions as well.

I told you so for what?

There is a very good chance that Kerry will win this election. When his promises fail to materialize and we fail to aggressively follow through in the war on terror, we will become a much more vulnerable country, both economically and security-wise. It may be me who says "I told you so".

>and is about as accurate as "tax breaks for the

At the expense of everything else...security, freedoms, balanced budget, etc. Those paltry checks failed at their objective,,,pandering to the middle class and the poor. As usual, the failure GW hasn't a clue.

(once he conquered Baghdad to the 380 missing tons of explosives that could be used to kill our brave young men and women)

This is tantamount to "Mission accomplished" and declaring "major combat over" when nothing was further from the truth.
No wmds,,,but "look,,,,we have all these explosives and we have those chemicals we gave to Hussein who gave them to Chemical Ali who gassed the Kurds in the north. We can always get some of the flock to obfuscate and say these weapons COULD have constituted wmds in another than their current stable state.
No Osama,,but "Lookie what I did...I removed a man who tried to have my daddy kilt (sic) and who was no direct threat to the US and who never attacked us and who had no connection to the US."
Bush failed in all his stated objectives and when he realized he failed, he changed his objectives to those that had nothing to do with 911.

(this guy doesn't have a clue how to fight and win a war.)

>Oh I don't know. Free elections in Afghanistan,

You mean guarded elections with a conservative estimate of less than 20% percent of the population voting and less then 30% of the entire country even is aware of such elections being held or do not care.

>Saddam Hussein removed from power, 75% >of Al Qaeda command and control operatives >killed or captured.

Gee,,,must be all their sympathizers killing our young men and women. And replaced before they made the six o'clock news. In fact, all the news media is now reporting escalated fighting and numerous insurgents attacking US forces on a daily basis.

>Osama Bin Laden is on the run, and reduced >to sending video tapes instead of explosives >to make his point.

Not true at all. Explosives have been used and ARE being used daily against out soldiers as opposed to conventional warfare (firearms). It's you that is clueless about what is taking place, but you really have some stories to yarn.

>Iraq will be having free elections in January.

>I'd say we accomplished quite a bit.

Nothing that was stated, though. That you see free elections in some Arab country who doesn't want us there as a good reason to sacrifice American's shows you don't give a damn about the troops. The troops will protect us and lay down their lives for this country, all they ask is we don't send them into harm's way needlessly, may they and God forgive us for permitting Bush to send them into this massacre.

(You should see the mail I've been getting lately from our troops over there.)

>I'm sure is legit..... NOT!

Put your claws away,,,,you are sure of nothing these days.

(They know how much the Iraqi people hate them.)

>Some Iraqi people hate them. Those who >were not doing so well under Saddam's >oppression are not so hateful.

A minority.

(I believe it's another word that rhymes with hateful. More like grateful.)

And what you believe has thoroughly been debunked concerning bush..

(They are sitting ducks anytime they go out on the road. Many believe we are not that far away from a Tet-style offensive inside the Green Zone with hundreds of Americans and Brits killed.)

>War is hell. People die. That's a fact of life. But >if you are not willing to take a few casualties in >the name of just cause, then why even have a >military.

Invasion of a country that was no direct threat to the US is not a conservative move.Military is to protect the US, not install the Bush version of democracy in other countries. Hell, you know it's bullshit, which is why not one single Bush minion can explain why countless other countries with leaders as bad or worse than Bush were not targeted...many which would have been cheaper and closer to home.

> No one (except the terminally clueless >liberals) expected that the war on terror would >either be quick or easy.

Wrong. Bush said it would be a "swift" campaign, executed with "shock and awe".

>This is not Hollywood. This is reality.

Yet, the right continues to loook to Hollywood for their support. The right loves celebrities, from ronnie to Ahnold, the right needs to (california) elect foreign born citizens to craft American government because they can;t figure it out themself,,,,,that is pathetic and failure.

>75 to 80% of the military vote is expected to >support the president

Only by you who has no clue. There are thousands and thousands who had their tours and hitches extended and they are pissed,,,,add to that the number of those without proper supplies and protection, their parents and families, and your percentage you made up concerning the military vote is suddenly cast in the comedic light from which it originated.

>which is why DNC hacks have done >everything they can to prevent the absentee >ballots from military people from reaching the

One word..Michigan. Read the paper, turn on the news, get enlightened.

(Bush refused to go after and capture Osama bin Laden.)

>Refused? We've been hunting OBL since we >started.

Tora-Bora.

>Since we don't have free reign to just storm >makes it a tough battle.

He hasn;t been hunted since then. Bush said back in 2001 he was the number one priority. last year, he said "I don;t know where he is, he is not a priority". This is a slap in the face to all those who had families die in 911.

> OBL is likely either hiding in Pakistan or Iran.

>Neither place will allow our troops to hunt him >on their turf.

But Iraq allowed us to instil democracy, eh?

(He fought, every step of the way, the investigation into the 9/11 attacks.

  Who on earth would oppose such a thing? If

3,000 people died at your place of work and your boss said we don't need to find out why or how it happened, he'd be thrown out on his ear.

Bush's behavior after this great tragedy alone is reason enough for his removal.)

>No, you have it wrong. Bush originally >because he didn't fell it was necessary. But >once it was created, he didn't oppose it. He >was hesitant to open testimony before the >security concerns.

No, he had it right, and you confirmed it, only you added your personal belief and excuse yto why he flipped. Reread your statement. it confirms what Frank says.

(You already know that George W. Bush is the farthest thing from a conservative.)

>Really? I don't think that. He shares many of >my conservative values.

You aren't conservative, either. You're an admitted socialist (when the need arises) on many items.

(He's a reckless spender who has run up record-breaking deficits and the biggest debt in our history.)

>Hello? We're AT WAR!

War has a clearly defined enemy....this "war" does not. Who do you claim that is in this war? tell me "bad guys" or "American haters", as "terrorist" is so passe and not even believed by someof the most jaded repubs at this point.

>Of course spending will increase. Are we to >stop funding our troops because we're afraid >of a little debt?

All that debt, and our soldiers are dying because they don't have proper protection on their bodies and vehicles. Sticking your head in the sand only works when you are being trolled, not when the humvees in Iraq are being jerry-rigged with plywood where armor should be.

(He believes in having the government pry into everything from your library records to your bedroom. He has hit you with hidden taxes with his tax cuts for the rich.)

>Proof please.

>Name a bill that Bush has >championed which increases taxes on the >common citizens.

Bill? Please stay relevant, again. How about the entire education reform he is passing? You haven't even read it, or you would know the manner in which he is paying for it most certainly comes down to increased taxes on a plethora of items, including your school taxes that will be permitted to seek increases with no cap..which some would justify, IF the money was spent directly on teacher salaries or supplies for the kids,,,but it's not,,it never reaches that far,,,,more "trickle down" failures.

>You have Bush confused with Kerry here

(snip)

You're becoming very desperate in these final hours of the Bush presidency. Try and not invoke others when speaking of Herr Bush. He will be back in Crawford before you know it.

There is that tolerance level expressed by many righteous socialists today. If you dare exercise your American birthright of supporting a candidate who is not their candidate, one is a "clueless idiot". Meanwhile, the irony is that these anti_americans like yourself, wrap themselves in a flag and refer themselves "patriotic" while denouncing others for (gasp) exercising their freedom of speech.

Fine, fella...but the Siltronix 1011 was just the precursor to "export" radios. Thinly disguised as a 10 meter rig, it was sold to the CB market. Swan marketed it under the Siltronix name just so they wouldnt be accused of pandering to illegal keyclown CB'ers. No way were hams going to pay that price for a monoband radio, especially one that didnt just "drift"...those junkpiles MIGRATED!

It's always been my position on "gay" issues. You are either for the "gay lifestyle" and believe their lifestyle is not an abomination or you are against the "gay lifestyle" and believe that it is an abomination. You are either pro-gay lifestyle or anti-gay lifestyle. To make no decision is to have already made a decision.

I have several friends who are gay, both male and female. I treat them just as I treat everyone else, with respect. They also know how I feel about homosexuality, we are still friends. I don't insult them, I don't call them fags, homos or any of other disgusting terms that I can think of.

As far as the "original post" goes I didn't see it, my news reader only gets the past five days posts. If I'm away for a week I miss some. I don't have to download 10000 messages if I'm away for a couple of weeks.

If the context has anything to do with the subject my position still fits. You can and should be nice to gays without agreeing with their lifestyle.

Twist, it may be possible to educate the unread in the group only when their loved ones wind up in Iraq and faced with the prospect that being in an institute of higher learning (which we have few left of here in the US) does not allow them to pass on the draft. THEN, and only then will they understand what an evil man is the current president. I'm very sure Dave has a moron ribbon on his vehicle.

The problem is that Bush is spending money like there is no tomorrow. Would you rather pay now or pay twice as much a few years down the road? No one gets it. We have a huge deficit. Just what is the problem here, new math? One and one makes three? That is the kind of politics that have been played of late. Would you rather your wife spend your paycheck or just charge the same amount, plus more? What is it that you don't understand?

Lots of luck from Rochester, NY

Well, they don't believe any of the hype, from both parties. They know there's a deficit, they know it has to be cut, at the same time they feel that GW is going to raise taxes after elected, but no where near as bad as Kerry would've if he was elected. As for voting for the whitest teeth, that may not be so far off from the truth :)

I understand Jim, so do my parents. As I stated on a previous post, they think, to which I'll agree that GW's going to raise the taxes too, just not as bad as Kerry would. Of course he's spending money, it's war, right or wrong he's got a war on, so there will be a huge deficit. Johnson had a big deficit, Eisenhower, Carter even FDR in his last term had a large deficit. The only way to get out from under this, would be to announce a long term plan for a withdrawal from Iraq, then cut spending as much as possible and raise taxes accordingly. Now that's probably the way it should be done, will it? doubt it.

I received and old wilson 1000 mag. mount and want to put it on my quad (4 magnet) mount. I hear that I need a 18 ft. piece of coax for a counterpoise. Is that true? Any info appreciated.

Coax length is unimportant. However much you need to get from the antenna to your radio is plenty.

If you're matching SWR with coax length, there's something wrong with your antenna.

That person did not know the difference between RF ground and electrical ground. A solid electrical connection makes a decent RF ground in vehicles most of the time but it does not work backwards. Even though the base is insulated there is still an RF ground.

Fuggedaboudit and enjoy your antenna!!!

Yea,,,what I experienced was pretty muh the same thing. I've heard the "gay" term from the boys and "pathetic" from the girls, but as far as overuse went, the girls won hands down. While the boys may say "That player is really gay on their team",,,the girls would say "Like, that gay player, on that, like, gay team, is like, really gay."

Had a dream about dxing across the big pond last night....must be time to dust off the equipment after hardly being touched all summer. I have a few things to do, but I'm hoping to be in tip-top radio shape by Christmas. Freakin' hurricane Jean put some water where I didn't want it and I got to replacing and shoring up some things and you know how that goes..ended up redoing just about everything.
Peace.

Hi Twisty.

The problem with some people is that, in spite of having two eyes, two ears - but just one mouth - they still use their yapper more than their ears, eyes, and brains put together. Don't get me wrong, I'm not saying they don't have a brain or that it doesn't work... but it doesn't matter how good the engine is or much you rev it if you have left the gearbox in neutral.

I NEVER said I agree with any of those opinions, just that they exist among some people - different people have different outlooks on life. It must therefor fair to say that arguing with me that those opinions are not valid is about as much use as farting into a wind tunnel.
If they want to argue that those opinions do not exist, that everyone believes in the same notion of right and wrong, then that's different... then either everyone on the group is a Keyclown or there are no Keyclowns. Either way, they can retire from the group in the safe knowledge that we all agree.

You know, Twisty, my Son has recently hit that age. You know the age, where they suddeny find any taboo subject to be either cool or downright funny.
At that age, swearing is great fun and anyone they don't like has to be "gay". If someone who is accused of being gay touches something, that object becomes "full of gayness". Touch it, and you will become gay.
At that age, they have the ultimate get out clause for any situation that they wish to avoid...
"Could you go to the shop for me, Son?"
"Going to the shop is gay!!"
"Time to go to school, Son"
"School is gay!!"
"You can go out to play when you have done your homework"
"Homework is gay"

Unfortunately, some people clearly never get beyond that stage - they are destined live their lives with the mentality of a child.
"It's getting late, Dad, time for you to get back to the retirement home"
"The retirement home is gay!!"

Regards,

Peter.

Please go back to the parts you snipped, AND READ THEM.
Where do I say that I believe I have such rights, or that I believe in certain freedoms?

I note that, although I refer to some people being "pro-legal", you do not accuse me of referring to myself at that point.

I get the idea that you select a certain part and twist it to mean something different, so that you can feel the need to argue over something.
To back up your argument, you take PART of a sentence totally out of context to use as a suggestion that I am on a certain side.

Peter.

Looks like Bush will remain head of this country for another four years.
I will continue to support our troops while criticizing the president.
My hopes are that Bush will realize in the near future, that for each Arab he kills, countless more are waiting and willing earnestly to take the decedent's place.
Regardless who is the sitting president, he needs criticized, watched, monitored, challenged, reported upon, quoted, questioned, and held accountable. I take comfort in knowing we deserve the government we elect. His re-election may or may not be the demise of the middle class, but one thing is certain,,,,,those who voted for Bush, better damn sure Bullshit. I have a copy of the 911 report. What page number and paragraph are you referring? But what it DOES say, is that Bush received a memo summer of 2001 titled "Osama Bin Laden Determined to Strike US with Possible Hijacked Aircraft". It also goes on to name names and refers to the day when the Clinton folks met with the Bush folks and told them Bin Laden was at the head of their terrorist concerns. Rice, in addition to several other Bush staffers, brushed it aside because they wanted nothing to do with the prevous administration, let alone heed their warnings.

Tora-Bora was checkmate. At least, it should have been, much more than anything you can point to in the Clinton administration.
Need a page and paragraph number from the 911 report?

OK, here is the entire post. I only snipped it because it was the only part I felt a need to respond to. I still stand behind my original post that transmitting on C.B. is not a right but a privilege, just like driving a car. It is not a right under the constitution it is a privilege.
I did not suggest in my post that you were on ANY side. You read that into

This is the part in which you make reference to "freedom of communication".
If you can show me where in the constitution that mentions C.B. radio or any court decisions upholding freedom of communication by way of C.B. radio, I will retract my statement and issue an apology.

It's not hard to stumble upon an article here or there speaking of peaking a radio.

People speak of spreading coils, etc.

Now, I'm no RF designer. But those LC circuits are FILTERS not REGULATING devices. Soooooo.

When you spread a filter coil to gain power do you actually gain it in the desired bandwidth (usable) or do you get the same amount (4watts) of usable transmit and a shitload more harmonics at power levels over the power at your usable freq causing your audio to suck due to oscillation? (I know, long sentence)

I just don't get how changing ONE parameter to an LC network will gain power, But I DO see how it will knock it way the hell out of alignment.

Or am I wrong?

Chad

You get a few more watts at the price of harmonics. Depending on the radio there are better ways to achieve a few more watts without splattering the airwaves.

I'll get slammed for posting the correct answer but what else is new.

Manufacturers of Magnetic mount antennas recommend keeping the original length of coax.(Wilson, K40, RS, Antenna Specialist, ect.).
Why do they do that? The answer is simple. They realize that there is no such thing as a perfect or exact scenario for an antenna installation. They know that in a typical installation of their antenna the coax length will most likely come into play and can be beneficial. It can be beneficial in that typically the radio will see a better load with the manufacturers recommended coax length.

It's not that these antennas can't work with any length of coax. It's just that in most cases you'll get better results with the recommended length.

The hell with Afghanistan?? WTF are you smoking? Let me guess, used Kerry campaign posters?

I believe we kicked the Taliban AND Bin Laden out of Afghanistan in record time BEFORE enforcing the resolutions that the UN was TOO WEAK to enforce on Iraq. In FACT, we did in 3 months what Russia couldn't do in 8 years....and they couldn't apprehend Bin Laden either. But it's not over yet.

Saddam was an ass and bad for the environment. It' pretty obvious with the terrorists that are fighting in Iraq that it was the RIGHT thing to do. He left himself wide-open by NOT following the UN resolutions. If he had, nothing would have happened. WMD's or not....there would have been no invasion. Funny how everyone forgets that....but for some reason, they remember there's oil in Iraq and that the Bush family was big in oil.

I'm still waiting for the reports of how we're pumping the oil out of Iraq. I sure wish it hits soon, crude is over 50 bucks a barrel. You think GWB is saving this oil we're raping from Iraq for his retirement party?

Thanks for your support Sheeople

Now that the president has been reelected by people whom have had the wool pulled over their eyes, hang on. It's going to be a rough ride.

The plans have already been laid to reinstate the draft. Don't believe me? Google these two words: (1) Bush, and (2) Draft. You will be shocked. It does not bode well for your friends, loved ones, and co-workers. The facts were there, but were effectively hidden by the GOP. And to boot, think your acquaintances will be safe by being in college or leaving the country? Not so, that's there too. Education will not be a reason to avoid the draft, and extradition treaties have been upgraded to make sure no country is a safe haven for draft dodgers. And unlike Bush, you can't enlist in the Guard to keep safe either.

Cost of the war? To date, the cost is over $143,000,000,000. That's billions folks. Remember the tax refund check you got? Well, hope you didn't spend it; you'll need that and a lot more to pay for Bush's little game.

War on terror? Ha! Now that IS funny! Now think back to 9/11. Who flew those planes into the towers? I don't believe it was Saddam, or any Iraqi, was it? It WAS Saudi Arabians and a few other nationalities. Have we taken those countries to task? Why are we in Iraq?

Afghanistan and the Taliban? What happened there? Well, we dropped a few bombs and then we ran off to Iraq, whom we promptly attacked. Why? Does the word "oil" ring a bell? And let's see...where did the Bush clan make its money? Purely coincidence, I'm sure. The argument that we were liberating an oppressed people does not hold water, as there are many other countries that are ruled by unfair heads of state. But then again, they are not sitting atop a lake of oil.

Now then, what can you do? Well, I suggest you write your congressman, your senator, and even the president to inform them that you want us to exit Iraq. This applies whether you voted for Bush or Kerry. We cannot sustain this war financially, morally, or physically. If you believe otherwise, please do yourself a favor and pull your head out of the sand. The facts do not lie.

Not entirely. They have filter like characteristics but also perform an impedance matching function too.

> Or am I wrong?

The correct answer is "it depends". Without knowing the exact filtering setup it is possible to get more power while still maintaining low harmonic emissions, but this is not a given. The real problem is not increasing your carrier power, but supplying enough audio power to fully modulate the higher carrier power. The audio level you hear is due to the power in the two sidebands, upper and lower. The more power in the sidebands the louder the audio at the receiving station. The sideband power is completely supplied by the modulating audio. That's why some CBers use sideband radios. A 12 watt PEP sideband radio has significantly more power in the single sideband it transmits than you get in a modest higher power AM transmitter's upper or lower sidebands. You only need one sideband, but to get the signal you need the other station to be using a sideband radio too.

The problem with peaking a cheap AM radio is often there is insufficient audio power to fully modulate the carrier. The audio power is supplied by a small audio power IC in the radio normally with a rating of around 2 watts, which is just enough for a 4 watt carrier. Some may use a small discrete transistor amp stage, but anyway the idea is the same. The IC's are designed to work with one particular load and increasing that loading, for more power, can cause the chip to fail. So what happens is the radio gets peaked for more power, makes the S-Meter needle fly farther up scale, and the rest is in the mind of the operator while the radio tech walks away with your money, which you wasted.

I've just got a pair of Morad BC-7501 transcivers from a garage sale today (Melbourne, Australia). They are rather old and come with no manual or any document.

Does anyone know about this radio (e.g. operating frequency, rf power, etc.)? I would be grateful to hear from you

Thank you

Read about the economic global dominance plan with which the Bush family is involved. Manipulation and monoploy of the world's oil supply is achieved by exhausting major supplies,,,except "ours" (read: the US). This oil has private ownership all over it for the next several generations. China has been grossly overstocking crude for the past two years. They have processed reserves that would make our current supply look paltry.

>Reckon they should consider such things

I agree. However, enlistment in the armed forces is WAY down. It is probably because most would-be enlistees HAVE considered such things and decided that fighting for the wrong reasons (war against a country that never attacked us) is not conservative or the right thing to do, regardless of political position.
This theory holds much water because for the first time in years and years and years, enlistment is at a record low...not because these young men and women are not willing to lay down their lives for this great nation, but because they are not willing to lay it down for arrogance and personal vengeance. Bottom line is, even if one does support the war, the right of an Arab to vote is not worth the life of a single American. To even consider such is horrifying. The reasons given for this war are not worth a single life of any American. The only time our brave young Americans should be at war giving the ultimate sacrifice is when defending our country.

> Or is that just for people that want the title

Bush changed the rules mid-game for what our valiant young men and women are willing to die. Result: record low enlistments.

Agreed with tnon. As soon as someone mentions about using a certain length of coax with the CB antenna someone always asssumes it is to adjust SWR. It will not do this. It will change the impedance the radio sees which is not the same as changing the SWR. For example if the impedance of the antenna is 25 ohms 18ft of coax will make the antenna appear as 100 ohms at the radio.
SWR will be 2:1 reguardless of the length of the cable. AS most radios are antennas are installed plug and go without benifit of tuning and most all CB antenas represent an impedance lower than 50 ohms antenna manufactures typically reccomend the 18ft coax for best results under these conditions.
Most radios work better if they are mismatched above 50 than below 50. This really becomes noticable if SWR is around 3:1. Not uncommon on a typical plug and go installation. Otherwise length does not matter much on a well tuned and properly installed radio and antenna.

Jimmie:

SWR is a direct measurement of impedance mismatch. If you change the coax length, thereby changing the angle the coax is conducting, and the SWR changes, then there is something wrong with the antenna itself that needs to be fixed.

Physics dictates this. There's no way around it.

Coax Length DOES NOT MATTER for a single antenna setup. Period.

I'd only agree if the antenna perfectly decoupled and was a perfect load for the radio. In other words if everything operated perfectly in a perfect world.

As far as mag mounts and using a automobiles as a counterpoise ? ? ?
That scenario is not even close to a perfect world.

I often wonder why there is so much criticism when one suggests using the manufacturers recommended length. This criticism seems to be followed by the statement that "any length will do". They believe that 10 feet, 11 feet, 13.5 feet,ect. ect. are fine. Just don't pick 18 feet !!!!!! How hypocritical is that? Isn't 18' also a length contained within the statement "any length will do"?

Explain this, then... CB radio in my Peterbilt, with a mirror mounted Hustler HQ-27 on the driver's side.. 6 feet of coax shows a 1:1 on 19, 1.1:1 on 1, and 1.1:1 on 40... 12 feet of coax shows the same readings... 18 feet of coax shows.. guess what? the SAME RESULTS.

IT IS possible to get near "perfect world" results with a little work, and attention to detail.

By the way, I've gotten similar results on two meters with a magnet mount 5/8 2M Lakeview whip on my old Ford LTLA9000. Had to shorten the coax because I was sick of the bundle of it in the cab... no change in SWR over a four MHz bandwidth...

There goes the "magmount theory" as well..

If changing the length of the coax changes the SWR, then there is something wrong with the antenna.

No. Not true. I run 6 feet on my 1000 mag. 1.1 swr's on channel 35.

Great antenna btw. I don't know if you can beat one for the

SSB;
I know this was addressed to Tnom, hope you don't mind my 2-cents worth.

Very few mag mounts have an adequate "RF" ground, at least on 11 meters or lower. There isn't enough capacitive coupling to the vehicle body. In some cases the length of the coax can matter, not from a matching point of view, but as a counterpoise for the antenna.
I have seen mag mount installations where you could see the SWR change just by moving the coax around.

Please explain how a poor "RF ground" can be corrected by increasing coax

Let's see now, the Pentagon comes up with Bush's record and says,
"That's all there is, folks". A couple months later they say come up with a few -more- pages that just happen to fill in some gaps, again saying, "That's all of them". Then a couple months -later- they come Probably because nobody even suggested it except you. What -is-claimed is that he dodged the draft, which he did. What -is- claimed is that he didn't fulfill all his obligations to the National Guard, which he didn't (-regardless- of the status of his discharge).

Absolutely true. But finding out that those papers were forgeries does nothing to detract from the -fact- that he was AWOL for a year, and the -undisputed- records prove it.

Now -that's- paranoid. Seperation of church and state is not an attempt to eradicate religion: on the contrary, it is to -preserve- your constitutional right to practice religion as you see fit by preventing the government from imposing upon us the religious values of others, EVEN if they are the MAJORITY. I can guarantee that those right-wing conservative Christians who elected Bush would change their tune if THEY were the minority and if someone was trying to impose the values of others on THEM!

The real issue here is that homosexual marriage is an issue of religion, not morality. If two gays want to get married, who is it going to hurt? Not me. If that's what they choose to do in their pursuit of happiness then what right do I, you, or anybody else have to interfere? No right at all. Nobody, not the president, not the supreme court, not congress, and not even a public majority has the right to legislate religious values on others.

If US policy is to remove brutal dictators, why has the US supported and/or ignored so many of them in the past? For example, do you remember the Shah of Iran? We supported him and basically -created- one of the countries in Bush's "axis of evil"! And who put Casto in power? The US, of course. Why don't we throw him out now that the USSR is kaput? Because Cuba has no oil. Iraq has oil. That's why we threw out Saddam.

>We freed a large population of people who will eventually be self >governing.

They are now free to flee their country in droves, and that's what they are doing. As far as "self governing" is concerned, the US has no right to impose its system of government upon other nations regardless of how well it works (or doesn't work). That's a policy tantamount to the Spanish Inquisition. And self-government of Iraq is a lot farther down the road than you might think; there are still many places where US troops fear to tread, and no election would ever be valid until those places -- ALL of Iraq -- has been secured and stabilized. Until then, the US controls the government -regardless- of what you might see on the surface.

BTW, here's a tidbit I'm sure you didn't know: when the provisional government of Iraq took power it eliminated all of Saddam's laws except for one -- the ban on labor unions. Looks like it will be a great place to export jobs......

>We removed a source of weapons for those who seek to destroy our way

In case you haven't been paying attention, Dave, there were no such weapons. Like you, I initially took the bait. But looking at reruns of totally convinced of the "proof".

When Bagdad fell, over 50% of Iraq welcomed the US. Now that support is about 2% and dropping; i.e, the hatred is not based upon religion.
It's a consequence of decades of bad US policies in the region, and Iraq is just the most current and most outstanding example.

Ok, let's talk about his encouragement of the outsourcing of jobs to foreign countries; his opening trade borders with Mexico in the midst of a rising trade deficit; his opposition to a minimum wage increase;
his failure to provide employment tax incentives to large companies;
his passive support of forced overtime; etc, etc, etc. He's no economic genius. It's very possible that there wouldn't even have -been- a recession if he had done his job competently.

>The bottom line. I'd rather have MY money in my pocket rather than the

I think what you are saying, and I agree, is that you want -more- of your money in your pocket. The problem here is that while you got a check for $xxx, you are using it to pay for the higher prices at the pump. And because the fuel prices are higher, the cost of everything else is higher because it takes fuel to move and distribute all that stuff. Prices are going up-up-UP, but you think you are better off because Bush sent you a check that doesn't amount to a fraction of the price increases.

Now maybe -you- are better off today than 4 years ago, but there are lots of people that aren't. According to the IRS, the average income has dropped by over 9% in the past two years. The census bureau has reported that hundreds of thousands have dropped below the poverty line. And just for the sake of reference, a family of four with a household income of $19K is -above- the poverty line.

The "evidence" is that the UN, despite it's misgivings, is a solid organization that has the support of the vast majority of the nations on the Earth, and to defy the UN is the fastest way to isolate yourself from the benefits that the UN and it's member countries can provide; namely, help with Iraq. Of course not, since they stood to make huge profits by landing legitimate business contracts in a US-dominated "coalition".

When the war started the resistance was almost nonexistant. There was no air defense, the ground resistance was disorganized and sporadic, very little mechanized warfare -- not even a SCUD. Now the resistance consists mostly of IRA-style warfare which doesn't amount to much except dead soldiers and bad attitudes.

The reconstruction costs. They are more than 10 times than what was Wrong: they asked for valid reasons and for proof. Bush gave them (and us) lies and a unilateral declaration that the UN was impotent.

> Now, answer me this:
>Should those countries be allowed to stand in our way and force our >foreign policy?

Who is suggesting that they should? Like it or not, the US is part of a global community, which includes France, Germany, and 150+ other nations. If we don't play by the rules then we will be ostracized just like any other country that doesn't play by the rules (countries which we are quick to condemn for just that reason, with the exception of Israel). And you can even call that Kerry's "Global Test" if you want because the concept is the same.

> They refused to help and we left them behind and did

That war was 60 years ago. Most of those French are now dead, as are most of the Americans who helped them. I doubt that you are one of the WWII vets that helped liberate France, but if you are and you feel they have a debt that needs to be repaid then by all means go there and try and collect. What you will get is an earfull of how the US was a neutral (isolationist) country and avoided the war until Japan and Germany dragged us into it. Liberating France wasn't the first priority for the US -- it was just a pit-stop on the road to Germany.

Our long-term interests are just that: long-term. If you expect to survive in the future it helps if you can pave the path in front of you. Bush's policies toward the global community and the UN has riddled that road with fake road signs and bomb craters. Any president must accept that the world doesn't revolve around the US (something that Bush refuses to admit), and all foreign policy must reflect the parcitipation of the US as a citizen in the global community, not as a renegade superpower. The best place to do this is at the UN.

terrorists where there were none before. It has also caused more hate

Again, the issue is now moot. And again, I would recommend an unbiased source for your news. Regardless, Frontline did an excellent piece that covered both candidates from birth. It included clips of Kerry speaking on his positions over the years as they relate to current events. He was reluctant to go into Iraq the first time because he feared another Vietnam situation, opting for stronger diplomatic solutions. He held the same position for the second Iraq war. And voting records for -any- politician are a statistical nightmare: You can count numbers any way you want that will support any position you hold, but the truth is that bills are passed through congress loaded down with all kinds of non-related padding and pork-barrel spending. That's why Clinton pushed so hard for the line-item veto..... need I continue?

You missed the point, so I'll say it again: North Vietnam never abided by the Geneva Convention! The party that was responsible for the torture of POWs in Vietnam was the government of NV, not Kerry. Put the blame where it belongs.

Those accusations were not groundless or distorted at all. On the contrary, the war atrocities he described in that speech were more than accurate, and were later proven to be even more widespread than he claimed. That's a fact, and if you didn't learn as much in high-school history class then you probably didn't grow up in the US.

Those POWs took up their issues with the public. They were spewed right during an election and right at the public. Hey, it's been 30 years -- if they were so traumatized by Kerry's speech, why didn't they take up the issue before now? And now that the election is over, where did they go? They're gone. Duh.....

As far as the media bias, I've seen interviews of proponents from all of those positions from both sides. Maybe you aren't watching the right channels, or maybe you are just seeing what you want to see. The fact is that there were lies by both sides.

>> But while they do

>Please! Putting panties on the heads of naked prisoners hardly >compares to what our guys had to endear in Vietnam.

Which further emphasizes my point: North Vietnam didn't need a speech by Kerry to justify torture, and to suggest that Kerry is responsible for NV's violations of the Geneva Convention is pure, unadulterated bullshit. Just in case you haven't been watching the news (without any bias), it wasn't just a case of putting panties on someone's head. What happened was repetitive abuse aimed at degrading and demoralizing the prisoners without regard to basic human rights. They were abused physically and psychologically, sleep-deprived for long periods, threatened with physical torture, used as doggie chew-toys, etc. Some even died. Now you might say, "Even -that- doesn't compare with what they did to POWs in NV". Well, Dave, the US isn't North Vietnam.

Sometime when you have a moment, read the document that founded this country. In it you will find the precept that "all men are created equal" and that we have "certain unalienable rights". Notice the word "all". That doesn't mean just US citizens; it doesn't exclude anybody, not prisoners in Iraq, or Afghan prisoners in Cuba, or American citizens who can be arbitrarily declared "terrorists" and stripped of their rights without due process. It means ALL. And if we are ALL created equal then we should ALL be -treated- equal. That isn't happening under Bush's "Patriot Act" -or- under Rumsfeld's code of conduct towards treatment of POWs. (Actually, I think it should be PsOW....?)

Bush's idea of national security requires the sacrifice of some of the fundamental precepts upon which this country was founded: Equality and human rights. Maybe you're willing to make that sacrifice but I'm not.

>Sorry, But I don't see McCain's face in there.

That's a horribly biased article, but let's start with the facts first: "The existence of photographs showing Senator Kerry meeting with General Secretary Do Muoi is not in question. In the course of pursuing the POW and MIA issue, it is reasonable that Senator Kerry would seek to meet with the communist leaders of Vietnam." Another fact is that Kerry and McCain went there together, and both were photographed. You don't see McCain's picture on that page because he wasn't running for president.

Now for the propaganda: "The critical issue is that the Vietnamese communists have chosen to honor Senator Kerry in their War Crimes Museum [Vietnamese Communist War Remnants Museum] for his assistance in helping them achieve victory over the United States." How the Vietnamese percieve Kerry is -their- perception. If you share the same perception (and you apparently do) then it's reasonable to assume that -you- are sympathetic to the communists, which I'm sure you aren't. So the argument just doesn't wash.

Now, do you want to see a picture of daddy Bush with Noriega in a meeting he said never took place? Want to hear sound bytes of him saying, "There was no quid-pro-quo", and "Read my lips: No new taxes"?

>> It's a perfect example of how proper diplomacy is much more

>We won the cold war because we drove the commies in Russia to economic Reagan's policy was to kick Carter in the face and throw away the SALT treaty, which was the result of years of work and an unprecedented cooperation between the two superpowers, and a huge step in a positive direction. Reagan's policy was also to pump up the US economy with hormones, i.e, ultra-liberal government and military spending, effectively taking out a mortgage on the future and dumping the burden of repayment on several future generations. Neither policy worked. What -did- work was the gradual democratization of the Soviet republics, which was a direct result of diplomatic efforts by Europe and pre-Reagan US. Reagan's economic war was, in short, disasterous because just as soon as the USSR fell the economies of the independent nations were in such bad shape that it spawned civil wars and other humanitarian disasters. As a president Reagan sucked. But he did make Americans "feel" good for no logical reason, which is probably why he's called the "feel-good president".

>If someone admits to commission of a crime, should that person's

Consider them all you want. But also consider crimes where the perp has made no such admission. IOW, a crime is a crime regardless of whether it's admitted or not. If there is a difference here it's that Kerry came forward, told the truth, demanded accountability and was willing to take responsibility for his own actions. The fact is that nobody held him accountable because, as I said before, the "crime" was committed by the people who ran the war. And that's exactly who Kerry was addressing. When Nixon heard about the speech they didn't seek to have charges brought up against Kerry; instead, they plotted to silence him through discreditation (enter the Swift Boat Veterans, basically started by Nixon as a propaganda tool to take Kerry out of the public spotlight -- source: the Nixon tapes).

>If Kerry was telling the truth about his participation in those >atrocities (And having served for only 4 months he must not have >"cracked" yet), then he deserves punishment for those crimes. If not >then he LIED about it in an opportunistic way for political gain.
>Either way, he's not the guy I want running the country.

If everyone was so concerned about Kerry's crimes in Vietnam then why hasn't he ever been charged with those crimes? He testified before Congress, yet no charges were ever filed. Why? Not because he was lying because he wasn't, as history has already proven.

Also, he was released from service in Vietnam because it was SOP to do so after receiving three Purple Hearts. What you probably didn't know is that he actually -requested- to serve in Vietnam (unlike Bush who couldn't even show up for a doctor's exam in order to keep flying in the National Guard).

>>> which begs the

The literal interpretation of the Patriot Act is that a terrorist, foreign or domestic, does not have any constitutional rights; it also defines a terrorist as anyone that assaults (or even threatens) another person with a weapon. Think about it.... someone that you don't even know merely tells someone in the DHS that you made a terrorist threat. You are arrested and held indefinitely. You get no speedy trial, no trial by jury, no legal representation, no right to face your accuser..... you have no rights. It doesn't matter if your accuser is lying because you can't challenge the evidence. You have then become a political prisoner in the war against terror, and there are only two ways out: Either the US wakes up and fixes their mistakes or someone from another country bargains for your release. And I doubt the latter will happen if the prisoner is a US citizen.

The current situation in the middle-east has been created in part by US policy for over half a century, and to a lesser extent for over a century. Get a clue.

So what kind of details do you need? Should I have said that some anonymous "informant" sent me that info in an email? Would that make it more believable? Or should I include some paranoid speculations based on neither logic nor facts? How about a memo from VP Bush thanking Ollie for shredding the documents so quickly? (of course no such document exists, but now that I've -suggested- it I'm sure your mind is open for more "facts", right?) Hey, did you ever see that movie "Life of Brian", where he starts preaching and the crowd declares him the Messiah? I thought that was hilarious, them chasing him around and all the time he screams, "I'm not the Messiah!", and they say, "Yes you are!" LOL!!! It's amazing what people will believe just because they want to believe it. Just toss facts and logic out the window 'cause you don't need them to pick a president. In the United States you are free to pick whoever you want and for whatever reason. You can even vote for someone because his opponent's name sounds like "ray-gun"!!!

Well, here are the facts: I don't know who shot JFK. I don't know if there are alien spacecraft at Area 51. I don't know where Jimmy Hoffa is buried. I don't know if Roosevelt had warning of Pearl Harbor. And frankly I don't care.

But I know what I know from firsthand knowledge. The facts are things
I can prove. From my DD-214 I can prove I was in the USMC at that time. With the same document I can prove that I was a 2841, and therefore worked on crypto gear and had the appropriate security clearance. I can prove I was in Beirut not just because it's on my DD-214, but also because anyone entering the US/UK embassy had to sign a register (and turn over their weapons) at the front desk, which I did. I can prove that I had access to Major North's office not just by the fact that I know he had an office there and where it was located in the building, but that I can describe his radio equipment and how it was set up (I set some of it up myself).

I'm not saying I was buddy-buddy with the guy, or that we frequented the bar and had conversations about this stuff over some brew. The fact is that I hardly talked to him except to hear his complaints about his radio problems. I may well have been the 1984 equivalent of General MacArthur's pipe-stuffer. But even pipe-stuffers have eyes and ears.

As far as your opinion that the facts favoring Bush, maybe you should define what you consider to be a 'fact'.

That's not a fact. That's a prediction. It's very possible that civil war will erupt in Iraq and there will be no election. And even if there is an election, it's hard telling just how valid it will be.

The existence and/or extent of the alleged terror "network" is now in question. Check out the BBC's investigation.

I recently learned (as you can tell by reading some of my recent posts) that I don't have enough insight into the motivations of a madman to be able to make speculations about his behavior. Neither does Bush, the FBI, the CIA, the NSA, or any other "intelligence" agency. If we did, the 9/11 attack would have been prevented. Yet somehow -you- know that he didn't send a bomb for the reason that Bush busted his terror "network"? Damn, Dave, you should apply for Tenet's job -- I hear it will be opening up soon!

>It's a fact that I got a tax break thanks to Mr. Bush. And guess what?
>I'm not "rich".

The only people who -didn't- get a payola check from Bush were people who didn't make enough money to pay taxes -- i.e, the people who need it the most! And if you watched the debates you must have heard his answer to that problem: EDUCATION!!! Yes, George thinks that all the unemployment woes can be solved if everyone goes to college, despite the fact that kids are graduating and finding a job market where all the jobs have been exported overseas. He is clueless that job exports are not limited to unskilled labor, but are increasingly including jobs in the skilled and professional categories. Over 30% of the US is employed in the service sector, with Wally-World ranking as America's #1 employer (which doesn't manufacture a single product and got caught hiring illegal aliens). All the manufacturing jobs (especially the union jobs) are going overseas.

The fact is that the recession was predicted early and gave ample time for Bush to do much, much more to lessen it's impact (if not prevent it altogether). Those tax checks were nothing more than a band-aid that was used to cover up a festering boil. Rest assured that you are going to feel the effects of Bush's economic policies for years to come and they won't feel good. The high pump prices are only the beginning.

>Outsourcing is a fact of life as long as we live in a world economy.

By golly that sounds like Kerry. Almost word-for-word.

> There is no way a product made with the labor of a >$20/hr union worker can compete with labor from a third world country.

And that's where you and Kerry begin your differentiation: It's not just cheap labor that's being exported. For example, programmers that would make $50/hr are being hired in the East for $12/hr. High-paying jobs that require college educations are being exported just as fast as widget assemblers.

No, but it's an important piece of a comprehensive solution. Maybe Bush supporters think there must be simple answers to everything. Or maybe they think that everyone else's answer must be simple while complex solutions are reserved for Bush. Either way, nobody has ever suggested that there is a simple solution, not Kerry -or- Bush.

Your antenna mount has a good RF ground. Coax length is going to make little if any difference.

Now -that- I find hard to believe. If you get relatively flat bandwidth over 4MHz then your antenna is basically nothing more than a dummy load, and coax length doesn't matter there either.

>There goes the "magmount theory" as well..

You didn't read the results of my tests a few months ago, did you?

Absolutely correct, and the problem is an inadequate RF ground at the mount, which is typical of mag-mounts (unless they are so heavily loaded with resistance that they act like dummy loads).

A given length of coax runs from the radio to the antenna mount. If the shield is not adequately grounded (RF ground) then RF will crawl onto the outside of the shield. When that happens your coax behaves like an antenna, having resonant and non-resonant lengths. When that happens, different lengths of the coax will put the antenna mount at different phase angles, therefore changing the load impedance and SWR.
There are only two solutions: Provide a good RF ground to the antenna mount (preferred), or change the length of the coax to 'tune' the input impedance of the antenna.

That's all assuming your radio is fixed to a good RF ground.

Good for you. I bet that if you used 18' you'd get good results also.

Near is relative. Anything short of perfect can benefit from using the manufacturers recommended length.

You haven't proven anything other than you are inflexible in your belief that other antenna installation can't benefit from recommended coax lengths. Your installations are obviously perfect because you are perfect and being so you have done everything perfectly with your perfect counterpoise in your perfect world.

No. When it comes to mag mounts on vehicles it most likely means that you left the fantasy world behind and realize that you live in the real world where things aren't so perfect.

He never said that a poor RF ground could be corrected by coax length.

He said in effect that the side effects of a poor RF ground could be reduced by a specific length of coax.

Dunno about you, Lancer, but the last thing I'd want is RF inside the vehicle.. which is exactly what's happening if you're using the coax braid as the counterpoise/image plane/groundplane...even partially.

I gave two examples... there are many more..

It doesn't prove my inflexibility, it proves the inflexibility of physics and my desire to achieve decent antenna results. I worked hard to get the results I did, and because of it, more of my RF is "getting out" than would have if I hadn't done what I did to achieve the results I got. If you want to take the lazy man's way out and risk RF inside the vehicle (and the associated problems, like the mic "biting" your lips, windshield wipers running on their own, stereos changing channel or powering on by themselves, speedometers waving at you as you talk, etc) then go right ahead. I, for one, will work towards a better antenna installation, so that physics can do its job.

Again, with a properly installed single antenna, coax length does not matter.

This thread was about a ....

3. with a recommended coax length

Does this thread represent a "properly installed single antenna"?

Yes. Coax length creates static. It's an electrical fact.

Hello All:

I have been reading most of the thread here and its quit good reading.

Great inputs from Frank, Sideband, Jimmie Lancer, Tnom, and others.

One main consideration on the magnetic mount antennas is that the coax is being used as a counter poise and a lead for capacitance to ground. So I can see where a manufacture will specify a 3/4 wavelength length of coax, 18 feet.

Anytime you use the coax as a counter poise or other end of the antenna coax lengths will effect the SWR, as the coax is no longer a simply a transmission line, but now also a antenna. I would love to have the time to do more testing.

You will not see this type of design in Military, Commercial, or Amateur Antennas.

I got a old Wilson 5000 magnetmatic mount antenna that I rebuilt and use on my car. I replaced the Krapy RG58C coax with "18" Ft of RG142B Teflon type coax that is bullet proof. It works great. I get it surplus at times.

But I wanted to add 3 or 4 each, 9 foot ground plane radial wires, being run over the body of the car, from the base of the antenna, connected to the shield of the coax. And do a few tests. Food for thought.

One thing I may do as a quick add on improvement is add in a Toroid Core in the coax about 9 feet down the coax from the antenna. Wrapping the coax around a 2.4 inch OD Amidon Toroid Core, will choke the outer coax shield currents from going farther down the coax, but allowing a 1/4 wave of coax to be a counter poise. Worth a try I think. It will also reduce some interference noise heard by the radio, that are coming in from the ungrounded shield of the coax. Neat-Oh!

Suggested Toroid Core Amidon FT-240-61

Nobody said it would be any different ,go back and read my post. I was very clear on why manufactureers say to use 18 ft and why you do not have to.

UNLESS SOMETHING IS FUBAR CHANGING COAX LENGTH DOES NOT CHANGE SWR. JUST THE IMPEDANCE THE RADIO SEES.SWR IS DETERMINED SOLEY BY THE IMPEDANCE OF THE ANTENNA AND THE IMPEDANCE OF THE TRANSMISSION LINE.
YOUR STATEMENT PROVES NOTHING.

IF something is FUBAR making it read right by changing coax length will not fix it.
You just sound like another ham that likes to hang around the CB group so they can sound important. Nobody even made the claims you are refuting.

This is true but is totally beside the point of why manufacturers reccomend 18ft of coax. If you have the problem you mentioned fix the ground dont play with the coax length. A good test for a CB antenna is to temporarily splice in 6 ft of coax . If your SWR changes your ground is probably bad.Poorly made SWR meters will cause this too.

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1421 November 5, 2004

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1421 with a release date of Friday, November 5th, 2004 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T. AMSAT says that the U Oh 22 ham-sat is dying and Israel says it may do away with Morse testing. Find out the details on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1421 coming your way right now.

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: UO-22 MAY SOON BE S.K.

AMSAT U-K says that the UO-22 ham radio satellite is not in good shape, and its looks as though its useful life may be over. Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, has more:

The AMSAT News Service which brought the first worked of the problem says that the cause if the satellite's demise is unknown. Bit says A-N-S, it may be related to problems with the satellites batteries which have been in space for more than 10 years.

UO-22 was launched in July 1991 from Kourou, French Guiana. It served for many years as the store and forward satellite for Amateur Radio packet and the world wide Sat Gate service. The latter is a linked series of packet radio networks in many countries.

The Ground Station control center at the University of Surrey has attempted several times in recent weeks to reactivate the UO-22 After one attempt it did come back to life, but only briefly. Other attempts have failed completely.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, reporting.

As time permits, the Control Station at the University of Surrey may make further attempts at reviving the ailing bird, but says AMSAT U-K it seems unlikely that they will be completely successful. (ANS)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: PC SAT RECOVERY SUCCESSFUL

Meantime, better news about another ham radio satellite. The P-C Sat ham radio bird continues to work perfectly following it's recovery two weeks ago.

To use P-C Sat, just QSY your APRS mobile station to 145.825 during a pass. You should not have to change any parameters. PCsat digipeats the aliases of RELAY and WIDE just like terrestrial digipeating. (ANS)

RESTRUCTURING: ISRAEL MAY DROP CW REQUIREMENT

Back on Earth, word that the state of Israel may be the next nation to do away with Morse testing. At least the possibility has been raised in the latest issue of the Israel Amateur Radio Club's English language publication Hagal International.

In a brief statement in the latest on-line edition, the magazine says that a proposal to abandon Morse testing has been raised by the nations Ministry of Communications. The publication notes that many European countries have been dropping the Morse requirement and that it expects to see a rather heated discussion among Israeli hams once the Ministry opens the debate for public discussion.

At the moment Israel maintains a 5 word per minute Morse testing requirement for access to the High Frequency bands. But it is also a signatory to the pan-European C-E-P-T licensing agreement and tends to abide by whatever regulations C-E-P-T adopts for its member nations.

More on what's happening in Israeli ham radio is on line at www.iarc.org (Hagal International)

REFARMING THE BANDS: FCC RELOCATION OF FEDERAL USERS INCLUDES SOME AMATEUR 2.3 GHz SPECTRUM

Meantime, here in the United States, the FCC has acted to include the first five 5 megahertz of the 2390 to 2417 MHz Amateur Radio Service primary allocation that it has opened up to accommodate federal users shifted from other bands. According to the ARRL Letter, the reallocations, which also involved non amateur spectrum at 2 GHz are aimed at making room for A-W-S or advanced wireless services including so-called third-generation wireless systems. In making the announcement the FCC said it worked with the US Department of Defense and the National Telecommunications and Information Administration to allow for relocation of critical military and other operations into the 2360 to 2395 MHz band. (ARRL)

RESCUE RADIO: DISASTER NUMBERS FOR 2003

If you are involved in emergency communications, these numbers will be of interest to you.

According to the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, natural disasters killed 76,806 people in 2003. This is three times the number of victims than died in 2002 with the rise due in part to extremes in the global climate.

The joint society report noted that an earthquake that killed 31,000 people in the Iranian city of Bam and a heat wave in Europe that killed 35,000. They say that these were major contributing factors in the higher toll victim toll.

All of this is a good reason for hams to be prepared for any emergency situation. Here in the United States the best way is by signing up for one of the many communications training courses offered by the American Radio Relay League. Just visit their website at www.arrl.org to find out what's available to you right now. (ARNewsline(tm)) from information from International Red Cross and ARRL)

TELECOMMUNICATIONS LAW: RADIO DISTRACTED DRIVERS REDUX

Some good news for those of you who operate mobile. The head of the National Transportation Safety Board says that education rather than legislation is the best approach to getting people to minimize distractions including cellular telephones when they get behind the wheel of a car.

At a recent press conference National Transportation Safety Board Chairperson Ellen Engleman-Conners said there still are no definitive studies showing that talking on a cell phone is more dangerous than any number of other motorist activities. This includes such activities as eating, reaching for a drink or adjusting the car radio.

Last summer, federal regulators announced new guidelines for states to follow when reporting crashes. Investigating agencies are now asked to say whether the driver was distracted and if that distraction was caused by a cell phone, a two-way radio, or something else.

Engleman-Conners says that having the ability to call is a safety issue and cited the example of a 16-year-old girl who's driving home from the library late at night and has a flat tire. Engleman-Conners said people are more likely to embrace safety measures if they're educated about why they are important.

New York, New Jersey, the District of Columbia and a growing number of cities and towns are prohibiting drivers from using cell phones without hands-free devices. (NTSB reports)

ENFORCEMENT: SOCAL HAMS CLAIM EX-KG6IRO JAMMED EMERGENCY COMMS

From the some people never learn department comes the latest on Jack Gerritsen, the ex KG6IRO. The same Jack Gerritsen whom the FCC has recently told to pay a $10,000 fine for operating without a license.

And you would think that would be enough to catch anyone's attention. But hams on one Los Angeles area repeater say that even with this fine facing him that he, or someone claiming to be him, recently jammed ham radio communications of an emergency at sea. And this time the United States Coast Guard is involved. Amateur Radio Newsline's Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, has the latest:

The story starts with Al Geiger, KG6FB, sailing solo to Guadalupe Island on his 36 ft. sloop, following another boat which was about 20 miles ahead of him. On Tuesday night, October 26th they were caught in a bad storm. Al turned back when he lost his Jib sail in the high winds.

Both his VHF marine radio and his 2 meter ham radio amplifier had failed. Without his VHF marine radio, Al lost contact with the other boat.

The alleged jamming incident happened on the Catalina repeater on Friday morning, October 29th. The Coast Guard group in Los Angeles was interested in obtaining any information that KG6FB had about the other boat. So it had Bill Scholz, W1HIJ, who is the District Communications Officer for the Coast Guard Auxiliary, try to contact Al on the Catalina Repeater.

The QSO between KG6FB and W1HIJ started at 10:02 AM and continued off and on through about 11:40. The person alleged to be Jack Gerritsen showed up after the traffic began and refused to clear the frequency. Luckily, a tape recorder was going and here is a small part of what happened. The first voice you hear is that of Bill Scholz, W1HIJ followed by that alleged to be former ham Jack Gerritsen. This was recorded using VOX, so any dead air is missing.

W1HIJ: Wiskey One Hotel India Juliet, Coast Guard Auxiliary Upland Radio 1. This frequency is in use for emergency communications. This frequency in use for emergency communications. Please remain off he frequency. This is W1HIJ, Upland Radio 1 out."

Unidentified Transmission: "Yeah whats your phone number. Ive never heard any emergencies on this damn frequency. You ever heard of 911 stupid?"

Repeater: "beep"

The station believed to be Gerritsen continued on. Not only did he pester W1HIJ verbally. He also played what can best be described as political recordings over and over again.

Soon, other stations believed to have come over from the 147.435 MHz repeater -- the one calling itself the "Animal Farm" -- also appeared on the Calalina machine. They began taunting and jamming the station believed to be Gerritsen, tying up the Catalina repeater frequency much of the time. The combined garbage made it impossible to continue the passing of emergency traffic and it was not until much later in the day that the other boat was confirmed as having arrived at Guadalupe Island, and that KG6FB had made it safely to Whites Landing.

Copies of the full recording of this incident have reportedly been forwarded to several government agencies that handle malicious interference to ongoing emergency radio traffic. We will have to see of any of them follow up on this one.

Another ham, Tim Thompson, W6DCE, provided us with whats purported to be a phone message left on Gerritsen's answering machine by local FCC inspectors. The investigators reportedly went to his house on a complaint from the Coast Guard to perform a station inspection but were refused entry. On the recording they urge the person inside to permit them in. This, to avoid added fines or possible arrest.

You may recall that the last person prosecuted for bothering an emergency communications service was Rajib Mitra, of Brookfield, Wiisconsin. As reported here on Newsline, last June Mitra was convicted under the United States "Patriot Act" of interference to the communications of a local police department. He was sentenced to 8 years in a Federal prison for that crime. (ARNewsline (tm) with infrormation from K6PZW, W1HIJ, W6DCE, others)

ENFORCEMENT: YOU CAN'T OPERATE THERE

A pair of hams who operated the wrong part of 20 meters have caught the eye of the FCC enforcement folks. The agency's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, has the details:

Duckworth: "Two warning notices went out for operation on 14.010 MHz. The first went to K0HUU, Donald Mullen, of Springfield, Missouri, for operation outside General class privileges. The second went to W6QEU, Peter Onnigian, of Sacramento, California, for operating outside Advanced class privileges."

--

Both operators were advised that such operation my lead to revocation of their licenses or to a monetary forfeiture. Also that no renewal or upgrade application will be considered until this matter is resolved. They were given 20 days from the October 18th date of the FCC's letter to them to respond. (FCC, RAIN)

ON THE WEB: QRZ.COM WEBSERVER DE-LISTS K1MAN

A popular ham radio callsign webserver has removed the listing of International Amateur Radio Network net manager Glenn Baxter, K1MAN, from its database. In a posting to his own QRZ.com website, owner Fred Lloyd, AA7BQ, says that he took the action because the staff at QRZ reached the collective opinion that K1MAN does not represent a view of amateur radio activities that is conducive to the furtherance of the hobby. His words -- not ours.

Lloyd has also started what he calls an informal survey of QRZ.com users to get their feelings as to whether or not this is the right course of action. As of Wednesday, November 4th, some 387 hams say that they support QRZ's decision to de-list K1MAN while only 19 feel the listing for Baxter should remain.

You can follow this one for yourself. Its on-line at www.qrz.com (QRZ.COM)

TOWER PROBLEMS: EXPLOSION ROCKS TEXAS TRANSMISSION TOWER

Remember our recent story about a fire bug in the Pacific Northwest burning down radio towers. Fires that cost one ham his home. Well that fire bug still has not been caught and authorities are still looking for leads in the case.

And while we do not know if there is any connection, but news reports say that Federal investigators are now looking into the circumstances surrounding an explosion at a power line transmission tower near Dallas, Texas on October 27th. The reports say that one leg of the support structure appeared to have been severed in two places.

Agents from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, along with local police, are investigating. (Published reports)

TOWER PROBLEMS: VANDAL FELLS TWO TOWERS IN TEXAS

But that's not the only tower vandalism to report this week. Another instance is in Milwaukee, Wisconsin where a company that owns two power transmission towers that were deliberately toppled two weeks ago says that it is willing to pay big bucks to have the person who did it put behind prison bars.

The American Transmission Company is offering a $10,000 reward for information that leads to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the criminal act that left 17,000 customers without electrical service. News reports in the one say that a person or persons unknown removed the base bolts from the eighty five foot towers causing them to tumble.

American Transmission says that it is installing two temporary wooden structures to support the downed power lines until such time as replacements can be put in. Meantime investigators want the person behind these criminal acts behind bars before he or she strikes again. (Published reports)

A HELPING HAM: GET WELL WISHES TO W4TBU

If you read the QCWA Journal, then you may remember an article about "Ultimate Elmer" Shirley Wilkerson, Jr., W4TBU, that appeared in the winter 2003 edition. A ham who loves sharing the hobby with others.

Now, Tom Webb, W4YOK, says over the QCWA remailer that Wilkerson, who is his close friend and personal Elmer, is seriously ill and confined to a hospital.

Tom says that Shirley is 84 years old and the situation has him depressed and he is refusing treatment. Tom says that this is so unlike Shirley who he describes as a person who loves life so much. And W4YOK says that hearing words of encouragement from the ham community might really help.

So we are going to ask that you take a moment, write out a QSL or post card and send it to W4TBU. Tell him how much you appreciate what he has done to make ham radio a better place.

Send your card to Shirley Wilkerson, Jr., W4TBU, Room 314, Community Methodist Hospital, Henderson, Kentucky, 42420.

Hams traditionally support one another in time of need. This is one of those times. (W4YOK, QCWA)

WORLDBEAT - AUSTRALIA: COST PROHIBITIVE TO KEEP REPEATERS ON THE AIR

Several repeaters down-under are now off the air. This after Australia's telephone provider Telstra put site rental beyond the economic reach of ham radio. Felix Scerri, VK4FUQ, of the WIA News Service reports:

From 22nd October the UHF repeaters co sited on the Black Mountain Telstra Tower in Canberra have been removed from service. Telstra recently carried out an audit of the site and discovered there was no rental agreement that could be found for this ham gear to be on site.

After negotiations with Telstra, the rental offer made by Telstra is beyond the economic resources of the Canberra Region Amateur Radio Club and, sadly they had no option but to remove the equipment by Today October 31st .

Better news however is at Black Hill the ACT's 146.900 MHz service is on air however it may subject to further interruptions. Following last years bush fires there has been a considerable amount of work done by the Tibinbilla tracking station staff to get the site fully operational. The task of the refurbishment and repairs is almost complete.

The repeaters that lost their home operated on 438.025 MHz and 439.950 Mhz. They served the greater Canberra area. (WIA)

WORLDBEAT: UK 5 MHZ BEACONS COMING SOON

The Radio Society of Great Britain says that is close to installing and operating two new beacons on 5 point 290 kHz. The new beacons will operate under the callsigns GB3WES and GB3ORK. GB3WES will be located in Cumbria and GB3ORK in the Orkney Islands. Both will have a stepped transmit power sequence and a 30-second sounder sequence of 0.5ms pulses at 40 Hz and identical to that of the Oxfordshire GB3RAL beacon.

The new beacons will have transmit times will follow GB3RAL by one and two minutes respectively. Together the three beacons will provide an excellent spread of signal source from across Great Britain and offering experimenters worldwide a unique opportunity to study propagation effects at 5 MHz from their own QTH. THAT FINAL ITEM: RFID FOR COWS

And finally this week a cow sized idea. in fact, its an idea that combines radio R-F-I-D tags and cows in a system called the National Livestock Identification System or simply N-L-I-S for short. John Williams, VK2BUI, is in New South Whales, Australia, where the system is being tried out:

NLIS uses machine-readable Radio Frequency Identification (RFID) devices to identify cattle. Cattle are tagged with NLIS devices only once in their life. Cattle identified with NLIS devices can be electronically read as they move through the livestock chain. At time of reading, each owner's PIC can be recorded and linked to the NLIS device. This transaction information is then stored in the secure central NLIS database.

RFID eliminates the need for "line of sight" reading necessary with barcode systems. The signal can penetrate through body tissue, wood, plastic, mud, manure and more. RFID in this application is passive and therefore requires no battery, meaning it will last for the life of the animal.

With Japan set to reopen import of U-S beef, government officials in that nation feel that it is more important than ever to be able to trace every animal from birth to marketplace. Many believe that a National Livestock Identification System using R-F-I-D tagging is the logical answer. (WIA News)

You still miss the point, the 18ft rule is not for YOUR installation. It is for the type of instalation where some one mounts a radio and an antenna out of the box with no tune up and expects to talk down the street without blowing up his radio. If the antenna is well matched to the transmission line as yours is it doesnt matter what length it is.
Coax length doesnt change SWR or fix bad grounds under normal conditions.
It will provide a better impedance match to a radio under typical out of the box installations.
Better impedance match does not mean lower SWR these are not always the same.

Example: assume an antenna has an impedance of 17 ohms. Not unusual for a short antenna. The represents a 3:1 SWR using 50 ohm cable. If the radio sees 17 ohms you will be lucky to talk a couple of blocks. Both TX and RX will suffer. If we add an odd mutilple of 1/4 wavelengths of coax(18 ft after correcting for velocity factor of the coax) the radio will see a 150 ohm impedance. Still not a great match but the radio will like it a lot better and you can probably talk a few miles on it.

Either way SWR was still 3 to 1.

The 18ft rule is also there for "just in case" . As you change the lenght of the coax the impedance seen by the radio will also change. Assuming the antenna is at resonance you will see a pure resistance at the radio for only 2 lengths, an odd 1/4wl(16ft) and an even 1/4wl. At all other length unless the SWR is a perfect 1:1 match the impedances seen at the radio end will be complex. This is not always a bad thing. However there are some complex impedances that the radio may not like. It may dislike it so much the finals fry, the modulation becomes mushy or rx is nearly dead or it may be no problem at all for any length on your radio. There are a lot of different radios out there so the manufacturer usually recommends something safe they figure will work with all radios. 18 ft is a length that will normally allow enough cable to reach just about anywhere on the vehicle and provide a radio friendly impedance at the other end of the cable. Does it really need to be 18ft, probably not.. If you find the rare case where it does you can chase your tail till hell freezes over.

Well, yeah it does. Since standing waves are -caused- by an impedance mismatch, improving the impedance match will necessarily improve SWR.

I think you have something mixed up here. If you have a 3:1 mismatch, you are getting the same power to (or from) the antenna regardless of whether the resulting impedance is high or low.

>Either way SWR was still 3 to 1.

3:1 isn't really -that- bad except where the transmitter's final is concerned.

The purpose of using 18 feet is not to effect a counterpoise but to mirror the RF potential of the shield at both ends of the coax, assuming that at least one end is properly grounded. IOW, if the radio has a good RF ground but the antenna mount is poorly grounded (like a mag-mount), using a 1/2 wave (as measured on the -outside- of the shield) will prevent the antenna end from floating. Or vice-versa.

Here's something to try: Set your GDO for 27MHz and run it over your vehicle. Some places will dip more than others indicating better RF grounds, and therefore better places to drill.

A sleeve with a high perm (u=>850) should also work at 27MHz. As chokes I've seen them used at the radio end, but maybe using one at the antenna end will improve the performance of a mag-mount....? I might just try that myself someday.

The input impedance to the antenna (and coax) is complex regardless of resonance simply because the feedpoint is slightly out of phase with ground (the antenna wouldn't work if it wasn't). Even if the antenna -was- purely resistive at resonance the impedance would be on the order of 36.5 ohms (ideal), which does -not- present a 1:1 match to a 50 ohm coax. If you are getting 1:1 SWR then either the antenna has some sort of matching mechanism or it's a dummy load.

But you are right, using 18 feet is a quick-&-dirty fix for a poor installation.

That depends on whether that "rocket scientist" is prone to conspiracy theories, or is firmly planted in the world of facts.

You expect records from over 30 years ago, before the advent of computers, and for an, at the time, insignificant member of the air national guard to be perfectly preserved in their entirety?

This still doesn't answer the question of why Kerry refuse to sign his

I'm not even going to touch the fake "documents" that managed to paint

I know many people who volunteered for the national guard rather than risk being drafted into the "real" army. That is not "dodging the draft" is it's truest form. That term is best served by applying it to people who actually left the country and refused to serve in any capacity. You know, guys like Clinton.

>What -is- claimed >is that he didn't fulfill all his obligations to the National Guard, >which he didn't (-regardless- of the status of his discharge).

That statement is one of contradiction. If he had failed to fulfill all of his obligations to the guard, he would NOT have been granted an honorable discharge. THAT is the whole point. The suggestion that he did not fulfill his duty is a rumor planted by his political detractors for obvious reasons. There is no hard evidence to back it up. The fact that he received an honorable discharge is all that matters.

That is EXACTLY what has been happening for the last 30+ years. The liberals, with the help of groups like the ACLU have challenged the right of the majority to "flaunt" their religious and traditional practices while, at the same time, have forced us to recognize and be tolerant of each and every little religious custom from the smallest chunk of rock on the planet.

There are benefits to being in the majority. I am sick and tired of the majority's traditions and customs being held hostage to the whims of the whiner minority.

The majority of voters who elected Bush are not all right wing Christians, they are simply people with deeper moral values. The two do not necessarily go hand in hand, despite efforts of the left to paint them with the same broad brush.

Likewise the government has no business overriding the terms of a religious institution to accommodate a group of people which does not conform to the terms of the contract.

The institution of marriage is born of religious tradition. It is a contract entered into before God. Marriage is clearly defined as a union of one man and one woman. The government has no right to interfere in what is clearly a religious institution.

A "gay" marriage could never be, as it is in violation of those terms.

That being said, if the government wants to create a secular equivalent of marriage for the purpose of extending the legal benefits normally associated with "married" people, then by all means go ahead and create that civil union. But DON'T call it a marriage....

You are partially correct about oil having some weighing factor. But you have to understand the bigger picture to understand its significance. It's not, as the simpletons would suggest, a plot to "make Bush and his cronies rich", but rather a trump card to play if we lose Saudi oil due to the royal family being overthrown by the

There WERE weapons. I am still of the opinion that many of them have Besides, it takes time to fix what has been broken during the years of Saddam's neglect.

Iraq resident Al-Zaqary (sp?) or radical cleric Al-Sadr.

CBS leads the left leaning pack, but ABC and NBC are not far behind.
CNN is kind of flip-floppy depending on the issue and who is reporting balance to the right. But they are very much outnumbered by the other

You have to be kidding! NPR? They are solidly liberal leaning. Listen other hand, when you are a liberal, you tend to think the "center" line is much further left than it really is.

When you have one news source which leans to the right and provides a point of reference by which the rest can be measured, the extent by which the rest are biased to the left becomes crystal clear. What is also clear is that there is one right leaning news source against a handful of left leaning sources. That's hardly "balance".

Exactly. Two years ago is not an immediate reward if political points were the main objective. People's attention span tends to fade very quickly. Look at the swift boat controversy. It was big news when it first broke (despite the liberal media's efforts to ignore or suppress it), yet by the time of the election, it was no longer a front burner issue.

Increasing minimum wage only drives up inflation. If a burger flipper is suddenly given a "raise" to $7.00 an hour, what does this mean for the guy who has a few more skills and is already making $7.00 an hour? Is he going to be content to make the same wage as someone with less skill and responsibility, or will he demand a raise as well? Hopefully you can see the domino effect here.

Then there is this effect. If I'm a small business owner, for the purpose of this example let's say I own a janitorial cleaning service. Currently I employ 12 employees at $5.50/hr. If I am forced to give them all a raise to $7.00 an hour, that will increase my overhead (Or more accurately my direct labor costs). If I'm not one of those guys who is basking in profit (and most small businesses aren't) I might have to trim my workforce to maintain a viable P/E ratio. So it may result in a spike in unemployment.

>his failure to provide employment tax incentives to large companies;

The recession was already in motion before he was even elected! The dot.com bubble burst, and the stock market dove in early 2000. The recession was "officially: declared before Bush had even put his first budget into law. We had still been running on what was leftover from Clinton's budget. The 9/11/2001 happened, and that prolonged the recession. But we are now recovering.

>I think what you are saying, and I agree, is that you want -more- of >your money in your pocket. The problem here is that while you got a >check for $xxx, you are using it to pay for the higher prices at the >pump.

This is true. But to suggest that Bush's budget policies have had a direct effect on the price at the pump is disingenuous. The best case you can make is that the war in Iraq and the instability there has kept the market a bit skittish. But since Iraqi oil has not been a major player in the world oil market since the sanctions, this effect is minimal. What HAS been influential in the oil market is the exponential growth in demand for fuel in SE Asia, particularly China. There have also been labor strikes in a few of the oil producing countries, and the hurricane season has disrupted our distribution in the gulf of mexico.

> And because the fuel prices are higher, the cost of everything >else is higher because it takes fuel to move and distribute all that >stuff. Prices are going up-up-UP, but you think you are better off >because Bush sent you a check that doesn't amount to a fraction of the >price increases.

What you said is true, but you are placing the blame in the wrong place if you blame Bush for it. Do you really think he can just call up OPEC on the phone and demand that they lower the price? That is overly simplistic thinking. This is, after all, a free-market economy. The price of oil, like everything else, is set by what the market decides it can bare, based on supply and demand. Right now demand is at an all-time high, and the supply is maxed out and there is an air of uncertainty which tends to make the price wildly fluctuate.

Of course, it might help if we are allowed to drill for some oil of our own in Alaska. But the enviro-liberals won't allow it. They complain about the cost of oil, yet won't let us do anything about it. Go figure...

>Now maybe -you- are better off today than 4 years ago, but there are >lots of people that aren't. According to the IRS, the average income >reported that hundreds of thousands have dropped below the poverty >line. And just for the sake of reference, a family of four with a >household income of $19K is -above- the poverty line.

I am better off. My yearly raises and bonuses have declined, but they are still there. The costs of certain products have increased. But I take steps to minimize their affects.

The bottom line is that the economy IS growing again. It might not be growing fast enough for those Kerry supporters, who are looking for that "Instant gratification" again, but it IS growing.

Now we also have to look at the world economic picture. Manufacturing jobs are being sent to places which provide the cheapest labor cost. This is not done out of greed, but out of competitive survival. If a U.S. company producing XYZ good, has to compete with a foreign company which also produces XYZ good, and which is free to utilize cheap labor, how can the US company be competitive and maintain market share without adopting similar practices?

Anyone in this country who is contemplating a career needs to take into consideration the likelihood that the job could be done cheaper somewhere else. People would be well advised to pick a job which requires that it be done here. This is a fact of life now. At least until the standard of living equalizes all throughout the world and it no longer becomes advantageous to move offshore.

Those accounts are highly disputed by many people. They're far from fact. Like I said before, if there were any hard evidence (Not anecdotal) there would have been trials and jail time. Kerry admitted that he took part in those atrocities. He would be in jail right now, or would not be in politics, as I don't believe they allow felons to hold office.

What I learned in history class did not include much of Vietnam, since Vietnam was not yet "history" when I was in school. What they did tell us was how brutal and unconventional the guerilla tactics of the Viet-cong and NV forces were. I guess that was before the days of liberal revisionist history. Tell me, are the communists still considered the bad guys, or have the liberals revised them to be "misunderstood" people that we were just paranoid of?

They're still there. John O'Neil explained your question very well. He said that most of those old vets wanted to just forget and move on. But when Kerry made his run for president, it just opened up old wounds. When Kerry then made his "heroic" Vietnam career (All 4 months of it) a centerpiece of his early campaign, it was all they could stand. They were then driven to set the story straight. The stories these guys tell is compelling, and you would have to be a complete left-leaning partisan to not be moved by them.

Whether they continue or not is a question. It's a moot point now, since their objective was to prevent him from becoming president. Since that objective has been achieved, there may be no further need.

>As far as the media bias, I've seen interviews of proponents from all >of those positions from both sides. Maybe you aren't watching the

What is that saying about "Lies, damn lies, and statistics"?

The underlying issue is that both sides were not afforded equal time in the public venue with which to air their sides. The deliberate attempts of the left leaning major media to suppress the Swift boat guys and the guys who made "Stolen Honor" was about as obvious as can be.

Kerry could have put much of it to rest if he had just authorized the release of all of his records. He refused to do so. So that begs the question, what is he hiding?

>>> But while they do

Bush served honorably in the air national guard. Clinton refused to serve. There is no similarity.

Kerry attempted to get a deferment 5 times and was turned down. He went into navy as he felt it "s,afer" than the army or marines. After only 4 months of active duty he was sent home after 3 superficial purple heart wounds. Is this any more honorable?

Most of what you said was greatly exaggerated. Yes, they were displayed in a psychologically demoralizing position. Yes, they were threatened by dogs. They were also "posed" in positions which looked much more cruel than they actually were. Did they cross the line?
Probably. But were they physically hurt on a systemic basis, no.

You have to understand that we needed information from the enemy. One of the ways to get it is through psychological means. As long as they are not physically harmed or emotionally scared, I don't have a problem. Considering that our enemies cut off the heads of our prisoners, you have little room to bitch.

That logic doesn't wash. Yes, I agree with the communist's assertion that Kerry was instrumental in their victory over us, because the evidence supports it. But I don't see how you can make the connection that I also sympathize with the commies.

>Now, do you want to see a picture of daddy Bush with Noriega in a

I've seen them. As far as the "no new taxes" speech, he tried to keep democratically controlled congress. The new taxes were a concession that he had to make to the democrats in order to get what he wanted

Had we kept with Carter's weak "diplomatic" path, the USSR might still Carter administration gave way to what we saw in the late 80's and into the 90's.

> Neither policy worked.

How can you say that? Reagan forced our cold war adversary out of economic boom. The evidence is there to see and is a matter of history.

>What -did- work was the gradual democratization of the Soviet You're kidding right? How do you democratize the soviet republics while the iron hand of communism was still firmly in place. Once again, you have it backwards. The gradual democratizing of the old Soviet republics took place AFTER the Berlin wall fell, which was precipitated by Reagan's strong approach.

> Reagan's economic war was, in short, disasterous >because just as soon as the USSR fell the economies of the independent

Well duh! When the shock of going from government supplemented communist run business model to a market driven capitalist system finally set in, their currency devaluated to the point where the ruble wasn't worth the paper it was printed on. But they've adjusted over the years. But such should be expected when such a large country makes such a radical economic change.

Oh boy are you one brainwashed dude. Kerry discredited himself by lying about his part in the whole deal. His documented association with known anti-war and communist sympathizers is a matter of record.
His whole speech to the senate in April of 1971 was produced to be the the US military as the pawns. Don't you wonder why Kerry never wanted to serve in Vietnam so badly, then why only serve 4 months and superficial wounds. He had a choice, he could have stayed. His wounds were not serious. He chose to leave because he didn't believe in the

We always negotiate with our interests as primary. How is that any different from any other nation? You extol the virtues of France and Germany's position to take advantage of Iraqi oil for food, yet the suggestion that the US had similar arrangements with other countries in the past is somehow judged to be "sinister".

No, unless the "informant's" credibility can be verified as beyond question. Otherwise it's just another "opinion".

Why stop now? Most of what you stated so far is little more than unverifiable opinions, passed of as truth, with just enough truth to be believable if you don't know enough about the situation, but not enough hard evidence to verify.

Sounds like you are trying to justify your belief in the things that you do. You have no hard proof, yet you want me to believe it on nothing more than your say-so. Can you understand why I am more than a bit skeptical?

The bottom line is that we each chose our side of the fence based on core beliefs. When I was in my 20's, I was exposed to the rhetoric of those dope smoking hippie-types and their "Down with the establishment" and "The man is out to oppress us" and all the other paranoid rhetoric that went with these left-leaning people. What they were spewing made no sense and did not jive with what I could see myself. It was probably no coincidence that these same people denouncing the "man" and those who were successful, were underachievers and lacking in any ambition, and felt left behind as other people made headway while they didn't. I didn't buy into their position, and instead adopted the conservative ideology. I believe in this country, and the opportunities that it provides, and I will do my best to derail those who would see it fall or who work to change what has been the greatest country in the world. Envy is a great motivator.

If you look at those who criticize this country and its policies the most, you can usually find a cause for envy. It's tough to extol the virtues of socialism and communism when capitalism rewards so much better. Their only recourse is to knock us down, thereby making themselves look better. That is logic, in a psychological sense.

So I guess we are both somewhat biased. We tend to believe information which bolsters our core beliefs, while discarding information that contradicts it.

Jay:

Thanks for your input.. A couple of things, though..

If the coax is being used as a counterpoise, it's not part of a capacitive grounding system.

The capacitive ground comes from the metallic base/magnet mount to the vehicle body, not from the coax.

A prediction I have is that Powell over at the FCC will begin to pass newer regulations on ISPs, and most importantly, the hosting companies. The internet, as a result, will become prey to the media consolidation and "standards" that are all the rage at the current FCC. Now, not to sound paranoid, but this, along with the expansion of the Patriot act, doesnt make me all confident about the future of the last true marketplace of ideas available to the american people.

Yeah, check-check. I'm with ya. I was just trying to ask(albeit, sarcastically) who the hell would loop coax through their vehicle instead of looking for a ground problem!!! I'm also assuming that if the above case was true, you'd NEVER get enough of a ground to get a decent(say 2:1)swr unless you have a few hundred feet in the trunk!!

I just always was told that if you have a swr problem, it won't be fixed by changing coax lengths.

Also, why do people have negative comments about mag mounts? Mine works fantastic. Maybe the paint on my Passat is thin:-)

He sure did. He said mag mounts have a poor ground. He said the length of the coax can help by being "part of the ground plane"(counterpoise). I'm simply saying you'd need a TON of coax to do that...and get a decent swr(point of post).

Hence, length of coax(within reason, obviously)on a wilson 1000 mag mount means diddly squat.

I'm I right, or wrong:-)

Hell Jim, every measurement made using ANY equipment could be a fallacy if taken out the correct(to disprove)decimal point:-)

I'm just saying (for my own comparative measurements) on my Dosy meter I've tuned my 1000 for 1:1 on 35 and I KNOW it talks nice:-) I'm SURE it's not because of the 1:1 measurment, but because of the antenna....and I'm doing it without 18' of coax....just 6'.

I also talk all over, from Alaska to Turkey from my mudduck mobile here in pa:-)

Jim:

No, a 1:1 match isn't a fallacy... but it's extremely rare. It IS possible to have a 50 ohm output impedance on the radio, a coax cable that is actually 50 ohms impedance, and an antenna that presents a 50 ohm impedance at its feedpoint. Possible, but highly unlikely...

For example, the 1:1 I'm seeing on the meter in my Pete is probably 1.03:1 or something... but the meter I'm using doesn't have that kind of resolution.

1.03 is close enough to 1 to say, ok.. good enough.. especially considering the fact that anything under 2:1 will be just fine.

cheers on the spell check guys :) 50 ohm impedance on all points may be fine but inherent loss on the connections makes it impossible to achieve perfect matching. closest thing i've seen is hardline connections on some of the navy test equipment (CASS) that i've worked with. that was up in the gigahertz range.

I like my music a little on the loud side but that loud heheh. But then I have to protect what hearing I have left..... too many years of abusing my hearing playing drums in loud bands,too many years of working construction (hammers pounding in confined areas) and too many years of sirens going off right over my head.

Now I suffer tinitus (sp?) and partial tone deafness.

I have to hand it to you, Dave. You sure woke me up as to the way so many people think in this country. I can clearly see that there is nothing to be gained by using logic with people who have already been lulled into submission by the opium of political propoganda. I'll withdraw my offer for the Copi book. But I will recommend Plato's

That was an issue when I did the mag-mount tests a few months ago. As it turns out, the coax can provide plenty of capacitive coupling to the vehicle, even more than the mag-mount under certain conditions.
But neither of them provide much coupling, not nearly as much as would be needed to compare with a properly mounted base.

I'd bet you're wrong for many installations.The only way to find out is to take the brand new Wilson 1000 mag mount that you'll purchase to make your point and cut the coax.. If you are so positive that your theory is absolute then you should not have any problem cutting the

The only FUBAR is your satements. If you have a matched antenna, and use a 1/2 wave of coax, you can use any coax impedance you want. Take a 50 ohm antenna, feed it with a 1/2 wave of 500 ohm coax, the radio will still see a 50 ohm antenna.

Nope, 18 feet is not an electrical 1/2 wave at 27 Mhz. If the antenna is properly matched and set up, (not just at resonance) any length of coax should work.

Don;
No I never said that increasing the coax length of the coax will fix the problem. I said most mag mounts mounts don't have enough capacitive coupling to ground to act as adequate ground on their own, which is true, at least at 27 mhz. The length of coax can be a large part of the total antenna system.

It was a snazzy little "8-pointed star" contraption that scewed onto the magmount base, then the antenna coil screwed onto it.. Cost about $15.. and they were worth their weight in gold, let me tell you. I got mine in So.Cal. when I was stationed on Pandelton. BTW, if you get down there, pop on ch 13 and tell Master Blaster that Crazy 1 said howdy.

Wish I could remember the name of the manufacturer, but I can't ... sorry.

We can put on a new high performance string to increase output power and add more channels. We can have contests who can talk the longest distance and who can hammer who. Thropies, Tee Shirts, Ball Caps, Belt Buckles, Autographed pictures of the leading winners,

We will have a shoot outs, we will throw a Big BBQ, Dance with live music, cold beer and wine, and we will have a blast. Tell Lies, meet new people, trade technical secrets, trade modified systems, maybe even bigger cans.

The further looks bright!

Is this the same concept as the 3 point thing they used to sell for the 102" whip that supposedly acted as ground radials?

Dr. D:

No.. This groundplane was actually on the shield side of the equation.. the centerlead was never touched except for the passthru to the coil. One PL-259 male and one PL-259 female connector on it, and it screwed right on to the base.

2701. Bust The Fako Dealers!

I agree it's high time to bust the non type accepted radio dealers. CB is most fun when using real CB stuff. Any idiot can run high power to clobber a channel. Whats wrong with using 4 watts and a nice antenna? I'm not a ham. I am a CB'er. There's nothing wrong with enjoying this hobby. Lets just do it the right way. Here's a few places that deal in 10 meter radios and amps for 11 meters. I don't know what we the law abiding CB community can do about it. The sooner the FCC does their job the better for all of us. Then maybe the fools that scream "AUDIO" and cuss and foul up the channels will be gone !

P.S.....we should also do business with those honest dealers that DON't sell modified radios and amps. Here's a couple.

Hello
I have a uniden madison with a noise problem.
When the volume knob is low i get a sound like eggs frying.
If you turn up the volume it helps but the noise is still present and is pritty loud.
Has any one run it to this?
Put in a new audio chip but it did not help.
Any one know what the fix is?
Thanks

The feedpoint impedance of most full wave loops is around a 100 ohms

Feed it through a 1/4 wave section of 75 ohm coax, that will get you close to 50 ohms.

For non-foam coax the length should be 6 feet

For foam coax use 6.8 feet.

The input impedance of a full wave loop varies depending on where you feed it.. No doubt there are a few points on the loop that show 100ohms, but my 40m and 80M loops at the house both show a 50 ohm impedance (it's complex impedance, but works out to 50 ohms) to the coax...

Move the feedpoint around the delta loop and see if you can find a place where the impedance is closer to 50 ohms.
